The Burnett Family is one of the most illustrious of Scottish families, with a history going back to before the Norman Conquest, an ancient coat of arms, and a record of many distinguished members in the church, in letters, the law and the armed forces.

In the 14th Century there were two principal families of the name in Scotland — Burnet of Leys in the North and Burnet of Barns in the South, each contending for the chiefship. The latter is now extinct in the male line.

This volume is concerned with the Family of Burnett of Leys, whose seat is Crathes Castle, near Aberdeen, on the border between the Highlands and the Lowlands, and with the eminent members of that family, including the famous Gilbert Burnet, Bishop of Salisbury; his son, William Burnet, Colonial Governor of New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts and New Hampshire; and many others.

A large part of the book is devoted to the branch founded by my great grandfather, William Burnett, Factor to Sir Robert Burnett of Leys, 7th Baronet, in the latter part of the 18th Century. This William Burnett was undoubtedly descended from a cadet, or younger son, of the family of Burnett of Leys. I have been fortunate in obtaining a record of all his descendants throughout the world.

Another considerable portion is concerned with the colorful Virginia Burnetts, a family which tradition says was founded by Thomas Burnet, third son of the Bishop, but this tradition seems to be entirely without proof.

The material for this volume has been collected over a period of more than fifty years. Much of it was obtained from elder relatives long since passed away. This has been supplemented by a visit to Scotland in 1900, voluminous correspondence with members of the family in many parts of the world, and by the inspection of family bibles and gravestones.

In order to visualize our ancestors as living men and women rather than mere names upon a printed page, some of them have been depicted in the environment in which they lived, by sketching a background of contemporary history.

This book has been divided into several parts, the details of which are indicated in the table of contents.

I trust I may be pardoned for including special chapters on my talented father, my gifted mother, and my brother, all of whom shed lustre on the family name.

There will also be found historical sketches of many allied families, including Chipp, Bradt, Balmareno, Forbes, Gordon, Lunan, Morison, Roosa, Shirrefs, Storer, Swartwout and Van Etten, and biographies of their more eminent members, such as Rev. James Shirrefs, D.D., and an account of the church in Aberdeen of which he was Minister for thirty-six years.

The genealogies of these families are included in the Appendix, which also includes several blank pages on which readers may add future records of their families.

I believe that all of the information, except what is specifically attributed to tradition, is reliable and authentic, and hope it may prove of interest. Grateful acknowledgment is made to all who have assisted. I regret that it is impracticable to mention them all by name.

No genealogical work of this scope can hope to be entirely free from errors. The author will appreciate any corrections that may be communicated by readers.

PART I

EARLY HISTORY

The Burnett family is of Saxon origin, and dates back to a period before the Norman Conquest. The name originally was Burnard, or de Burnard, then Burnate, Bornat, Burnet and finally Burnett. The Scotch pronunciation is BUR-R-R-nett, with the accent strongly on the first syllable.

According to Burke's Peerage and other authorities, a Burnard appears in the Domesday Survey as a mesne¹ tenant of the Manor of Arlesey in Bedfordshire, as well as other Manors in that county and in Hampshire and Wiltshire also.

In the reign of Henry I (1100-35) Rogerus Filius Burnardi, probably a son of the Domesday tenant, bestowed upon the monks of St. Neots in Huntingdonshire various portions of the Bedfordshire and Wiltshire Manors held by his father, as shown by the records of St. Neots.

Roger Burnard, eldest son of this Roger, was at least equally with his father a benefactor of St. Neots, on which he bestowed the churches of Boscumbe, Cheldreton, Cotford and Eddeworth, for the souls of his father and mother, whose bodies rest there. Another son founded a branch of the family at Beston in the county of Bedford.

Odo Burnard, son of the last-named Roger, confirmed the above gifts, and granted various charters to Waltham, in county Essex, prior to 1192. In his seals attached to the Waltham documents lies the chief evidence that the Burnards of Wiltshire and Bedfordshire were progenitors of the Burnards of the North. Armorial seals were then a novelty, and were only used by families of more than ordinary consideration. One of these seals contains three leaves placed upon an escutcheon, which is characteristic of the Burnett coat-of-arms down to the present day.

In the 12th Century Burnards appear among the numerous English and Normans who came to Scotland in the train of David I (1124-53). They are found owning the very considerable barony of Farningdown or Fairnington, in the county and parish of Roxburgh, and figured during the 13th Century as benefactors of Melrose Abbey and other religious houses.

David I will be remembered as the king who introduced Norman feudalism into Scotland, where it eventually developed into a system unsurpassed in any other nation.

He also reorganized the Church of Scotland, and he and his nobles granted much land to their favorite churches and monasteries. This tended to promote the prosperity of the kingdom, as the monks were the best agriculturists of the country.

These facts have been recalled for the purpose of indicating conditions of life in Scotland at this stage in the history of the Burnett Family.

EXPLANATORY NOTE

The information in the following chapters, as well as much of that in the preceding pages, has been obtained from The Family of Burnett of Leys with Collateral Branches, from the manuscript of the late George Burnett, LL. D., edited by Col. James Allardyce, LL. D., and published by the New Spalding Club of Aberdeen in 1901. The assistance offered by this volume is most gratefully acknowledged.

Information subsequent to the above date has been obtained from Burke's Peerage, Baronetage and Knightage, 1939, Burke's Landed Gentry, 1939, Who's Who, 1944, and from the persons concerned.

The main line of the Family of Burnett of Leys, from Alexander Burnard, the progenitor, down to the present Baronet, is treated under the heading:

DEESIDE BURNETTS

The various collateral branches, which were offshoots of the main line in the 17th and 18th Centuries, are shown under the following heads:

RAMSAY, Paternally Burnetts
BURNETTS OF CRAIGMYLE
BURNETTS OF KEMNAY
BURNETTS OF CRIMOND
BURNETTS OF MONBODDO

In the following pages the text is confined to the main line of the family, the main line of each branch, and the more distinguished members of each line.

In all the turbulent history of medieval Scotland the name of Robert the Bruce shines like a beacon light, for it was he who achieved his country's independence.

It will be recalled that, although he eventually became the great national hero, he was not even a Scot.

He was a descendant of a Norman noble who came to England with William The Conqueror, and whose son was one of the hated Norman adventurers who received large grants of land in Scotland from David I. As the young Earl of Carrick, Robert was a favorite at the court of Edward I, to whom he had repeatedly sworn fealty. But when he was in a position to assert a claim to the Scottish throne he renounced his allegiance to Edward, slew the rival claimant, and had himself crowned King of the Scots as Robert I.

It will also be remembered that, with the powerful Edward I bent upon the conquest of Scotland, and without the support of most of his own nobles, Robert was soon faced by the armed might of both kingdoms and was compelled to flee for his life, excommunicated and hunted. Although he was crowned in 1306, he was to fight for more than twenty years, at first almost single-handed, to preserve his crown and to fully free his kingdom from English rule.

But by 1323 he was firmly enough established to begin to recompense those adherents who had been faithful to him in the struggle for independence. One of these was

I

ALEXANDER BURNARD, who was doubtless a member of the Farningdoun family already mentioned. Little is known of his history, and we can only judge by the extent of the land granted him that he had rendered considerable service to the King in other ways besides those about to be alluded to in connection with the Park of Drum.

Drum had been a royal forest before the War of Succession, and part of that forest had been converted into a Park by Bruce. Another portion had been bestowed upon Alexander Burnard before 1 February, 1322-23¹, which evidently included the post of King's Forester, for on 28 March, 1322-23, a charter was granted to him which narrated that the custody of the Forest of Drum, at first granted to Burnard, had been transferred to William of Irwyn; and the king granted to Burnard, for his aid in making the aforementioned Park, the lands of Killenach-clerach and certain other lands in the forest; also, in compensation for the loss of the forestship, the six merk lands of Easter and Wester Cardney in the shire of Aberdeen.

Of the lands in the forest so conveyed, the River Dee was the southern boundary, and the western boundary included the Loch (lake) and Island of Banchory, afterwards called the Loch of Leys.

Two years later, on 29 January, 1324-25, Alexander Burnard had a second charter conveying lands in the Sherifffdoms of Kincardine and Aberdeen which had apparently come into the King's hands by forfeiture.

Regarding the Island in the Loch of Leys it is to be noted that this lake was completely drained in 1850, and it was found that the island was artificial, constructed of earth and stone laid on a sub-stratum of oak and birch trees, with a circuit of oak piles to protect it from the action of the water.

This wooden foundation, being completely submerged, had apparently stood for at least five hundred years, as there is strong reason for believing that the building on the island was a fortalice or stronghold of Alexander Burnard and his successors down to the middle of the 16th Century, when Crathes Castle was begun. Its occupation during that period was proved by the fact that in the course of the draining operations there were found buried below the bottom of the lake some bronze pots or cooking utensils which have been pronounced by archaeological experts to be not earlier than the 14th nor later than the 16th Century. It is recorded in the diary of James Horn Burnett, 10th Baronet, who drained the lake, that when the foundation logs were uncovered "the bark was quite fresh."

It has been mentioned that Alexander Burnard's services to Robert the Bruce must have been considerable to have occasioned the extensive grants to him.

Perhaps it may be of interest to recall some of the stirring events of those far-off days, if for no other purpose than to enable us to visualize this important ancestor as an active and living person.

It will be especially interesting to those members of the Burnett Family who also have Chipp ancestry if they will remember that John and Roger Chippe were Ushers of the Wardrobe of King Edward I, and also of his successor, Edward II, and were doubtless with those monarchs during their campaign against Robert the Bruce. In those days the King's Wardrobe was the financial department of the royal household and frequently accompanied the King in the field, as explained in my history of The Chipp Family in England and America.

A similar situation arose more than four centuries later when Chipps and Burnetts found themselves on opposite sides in the War of the American Revolution. In that war John and Joseph Chipp were American soldiers, and Robert Burnett, afterwards Sir Robert, 7th Baronet, was one of the British officers captured with Gen. Burgoyne at the Battle of Saratoga.

It is known that at the time of the grant to Alexander Burnard other lands somewhat similar in location and extent were conferred on William of Irvine, believed to have been the King's secretary. From this it may be inferred that possibly Alexander also was close to the King's person.

When, in 1314, the English and Scottish armies met at Bannockburn, it is altogether probable that Alexander Burnard was with King Robert's forces on that memorable day, and witnessed how the King's military genius and the courage of his followers overwhelmingly defeated the flower of the English army.

In those days battles were conducted according to the rules and usages of chivalry. In accordance with that code, when the armies faced each other Sir Henry de Bohun rode out along from the English ranks to challenge a Scottish champion to single combat.

Sir Herbert Maxwell, in his excellent and authoritative work on Robert the Bruce, thus describes the encounter:

"He was mounted on a powerful destrier, and armed at all points. A shudder must have run through the Scottish battalions when the King himself spurred forward on his little hackney to take up the challenge. The encounter was as brief as it was decisive. de Bohun, lance in rest, charged the King, whose pony nimbly avoided the shock. Bruce, rising in his stirrups, smote the English knight on his helmet as he passed, with such violence that his battle axe clove his head from the crown to the chin . . .

"What tremendous issues depended at that moment on the nerve and skill of a single mortal: The whole future history of Great Britain, involving the existence of dynasties and the welfare of millions, was staked on the fibre of one arm and the coolness of one head."

The result of this famous battle is well known, and will forever thrill the hearts of Scotsmen as long as warm blood flows in their veins. It must be especially thrilling to the descendants of Alexander Burnard to reflect that an ancestor of theirs undoubtedly had a part in such a glorious victory.

The successor and undoubtedly eldest son of Alexander was

II

Symon Burnard, whose son,

III

William Burnard, obtained from Robert II (1378) a charter of lands held by his father in the forest of Drum.

IV

Robert Burnard, very probably a son of William, was Deputy Sheriff of Kincardineshire in 1391. He is also described as Robert Burnat. He was succeeded by John Burnet "of Leys" in 1446. The designation "of Leys" is met here for the first time — and "Leys" appears in charters from this date onward.

V

From about this time the surname of the family becomes less uniform — Burnat, Burnet, Burnate and Bornat being all frequently found. This is strikingly illustrated by the fact that the father of John Burnet was known as Robert Burnarde, while his successor was John Burnard.

John Burnet died in 1454 and was succeeded by (probably his son) —

VI

Alexander Burnard of Leys (1454-1505) who continued in possession for half a century and was the first "Baron of Leys," during the reigns of James II, III and IV.

It was about this time that we first find a close connection between the Burnets and the Abbey of Arbroath. It was the policy of this religious house to be on friendly terms with the magnates of the district, the greatest of whom were numbered among the vassals and tenants of the Abbot of Arbroath, from whom they obtained the lands which they held on free charter or lease.

In pursuance of this policy Alexander Burnard obtained several long-term tacks (leases) from Abbot David Lecton of Arbroath, including a nine-year tack of the greater tithes of the church of Banchory-Ternan, which was subsequently renewed to his successors for terms aggregating more than fifty years.

This is the church near Crathes castle where I found the graves of Grandfather William Burnett and Helen Leighton, his wife.

VII

Alexander Burnet of Leys (1505-1529), son of the foregoing, came into possession of the Leys estate in 1505, and retained all of his father's acquisitions by way of tack from the monastery of Arbroath, and added extensively to them.

A younger son of this laird of Leys, Master Duncan Burnet, became canon of Aberdeen cathedral, in a portion of which Dr. James Shirrefs preached more than two centuries later, after it had become a Presbyterian church.

The Chartulary of Aberdeen contains a letter from James V, in 1540, praying the Bishop to consent to the allowance of two marks yearly (a little over twenty-six shillings) for mass to be said for the King and for Master Duncan Burnet.

VIII

Alexander Burnet, younger of Leys, with his wife Agnes Lechton, came into possession in 1501 and added to the ever-accumulating lands held by the Burnets from the monastery of Arbroath. These new acquisitions included half the town of Banchory, with its ferryboat.

IX

Alexander Burnet of Leys (1529-1574), son of the last-named, lived through the period immediately preceding the Scottish Reformation, and during the crisis of that movement, and his history shows that the friends of the old church, as well as the zealous reforming lords, occasionally reaped temporal benefit from its downfall.

The circumstance that the laird of Leys had an uncle (Duncan Burnet) who was a prebendary of St. Machar's Cathedral in Aberdeen, naturally brought him into friendly relations with the other members of the chapter of Aberdeen. One of these, Robert Hamilton, held the wealthy prebend of Kincardine, and belonged to the influential Sorne and Sanquhar branch of the house of Hamilton.

It was about this period that the dignified clergy, foreseeing the coming storm, began to systematically dilapidate their benefices whenever they could command sufficient influence at court to obtain Royal confirmation of their gifts.

Robert Hamilton's daughter Janet, richly endowed, became the wife of Alexander Burnet of Leys, and, evidently in pursuance of the above policy, she and her husband became the beneficiaries of numerous grants from the rich prebend of Kincardine. However, all of his grants were duly confirmed by the Crown, which made them perfectly regular.

An important acquisition by this laird was Invery, with the remaining half of the town of Banchory, which were first leased to him and his wife by John Hamilton, Archbishop of St. Andrews, and afterwards conveyed outright for the sum of four hundred marks (about two hundred and seventy-five pounds).

In the time of this laird it seems to have been felt that the modest lake-dwelling on the Loch of Leys was no longer adequate to the requirements of the family, and that it was desirable that they should have a residence in a more agreeable situation and on a scale more commensurate with the increased wealth and power of the Burnets.

Therefore Crathes Castle was begun in 1553, twenty-three years before the death of this Alexander, and finished under another Alexander, his great grandson, in 1596. It stands on a pleasant and well-wooded spot looking down on the Valley of the Dee. A description of this Castle will be found in Chapter 8.

Janet Hamilton having died, Alexander Burnet married Marjory, second daughter of John, sixth Lord Forbes and widow of Forbes of Brux. There is no record of any children from this second marriage, but Alexander Burnet and Janet Hamilton had seven sons and four daughters, including John, his father's heir, of whom more presently, and Master Thomas, the second son, who succeeded his great uncle Duncan Burnet in the canonry of Aberdeen and the rectory of Methlick, and also held the office of Commissary of Aberdeen.

X

John Burnet of Leys (1574-75) was the next laird, but was almost immediately succeeded by his son,

XI

Alexander Burnet of Leys (1575-78), who was chiefly noteworthy for his ambition to make his sons men of learning and culture, in which he was, in the main, successful. His eldest son,

XII

Alexander Burnet of Leys (1578-1619) married Katherine Gordon of the well-known Gordon clan, and had a numerous family, many of whom obtained distinction.

In 1596 this laird completed Crathes Castle, begun by his great grandfather forty-three years before. He also made considerable additions to the family holdings. The most important of these was Muchalls, a considerable estate on the coast of Kincardineshire, which was subsequently incorporated in the barony of Leys. On this property he commenced the construction of another castle, which was completed by his son and successor.

Katherine Gordon was the eldest daughter of Alexander Gordon of Lesmoir, and her arms, impaled² with those of her husband, are found on the wall of Crathes Castle and depicted on the ceiling of the chapel and elsewhere.

One of the sons of this marriage succeeded his father and became the first Baronet. Two others established important branches of the family, which will be noted later.

XIII

Sir Thomas Burnet of Leys, 1st Baronet, (1619-53) was the most distinguished member of the family down to this time. In 1619 he was made an honorary burgess of Aberdeen and was appointed by James VI one of a body of Commissioners to visit the University of Aberdeen and inquire into its condition. In 1620 he was Knighted, and the following year represented Kincardineshire in Parliament. In 1626 he was made a Baronet of Nova Scotia, with a grant of lands under the description of the "barony and regality of Leyisburnet," amounting to 16,000 acres.

The castle or mansion house of Muchalls, begun by his father, was completed by Sir Thomas in 1627, and is a favorable specimen of the smaller baronial residences of its date. It is not now in the possession of the family

He also did much to improve and beautify the surroundings of Crathes Castle, and added much additional land to the estate.

He was an ardent Covenanter, and suffered great loss and hardship for the cause.

Sir Thomas had always been interested in King's College, Aberdeen, his Alma Mater, and in 1648 he endowed three bursaries, or scholarships, there. He also endowed a grammar school and a hospital.

Sir Thomas Burnet, First Baronet
From a painting by George Jameson in Crathes Castle.

Portrait of [illegible name]

Sir Thomas was twice married. His first wife was Margaret, eldest daughter of Sir Robert Douglas of Glenbervie, second son of the 9th Earl of Angus. By her he had two sons and two daughters.

His second wife was Jean, daughter of Sir John Moncreiff of that Ilk, and widow of Sir Simon Fraser of Inverallochy, third son of the 6th Lord of Lovat. The issue of this marriage was three sons and four daughters. The eldest son, Thomas, was first laird of Sauchen, from whom Amelia Shirrefs was descended, as shown in the Appendix.

XIV

Sir Alexander Burnett of Leys, 2nd Baronet (1653-60), was a grandson of the former Baronet, and was the first of the family to spell his name with two t's. He was a boy of sixteen, and was immediately faced with heavy responsibilities. Sir Thomas had left many debts, and to discharge them it was necessary to mortgage parts of the estate, including Muchalls.

He married Elizabeth Coutts of the family of Coutts of Auchtercaul, by whom he had six children. His youngest daughter, Margaret, married a cousin, Alexander Burnett of Monboddo, by whom she was grandmother to Lord Monboddo, one of the most distinguished members of the family, an account of whom will be found in Chapter 11.

XV

Sir Thomas Burnett of Leys, 3rd Baronet (1663-1714), like his predecessor, was very young when he succeeded to the title. He found his estate in a very encumbered condition, due to the debts and extravagances of his father, but owing to the good management of Master Robert Burnett, his tutor and guardian, usually known as the "Tutor of Leys," they were fairly prosperous by the time he reached his majority.

He was Commissioner to the Scottish Parliament for Kincardineshire throughout the reign of William and Anne, from 1689 to 1707, and was much in the confidence of the Government. He was appointed on important committees and given posts of responsibility. He was on a Committee appointed to put the country in a state of defence and also for deciding disputed elections. In the Parliament of 1690 he was one of a Committee of nine from each estate for the plantation of Kirks and the valuation of tithes, and a Commission to see that the "Principals, Professors and Regents of the Universities subscribed to the Confession of Faith, took the oath of allegiance, and be persons of pious, peaceable and loyal conversations" and was one of four persons chosen to administer the office of Clerk Register.

Shortly before the death of King William there was an intention of raising him to the peerage, but the King died before signing the patent.

He was elected a member of the British Parliament, but apparently never presented his commission. He was also elected a member of the Scotch Privy Counsel and of a commission for constituting the Court of the Exchequer.

Finding Crathes Castle not entirely in keeping with the comforts and luxuries which had been gradually finding their way into the mansions of the south of Scotland, he built a large three-story addition, containing, among other things, a new doorway and entrance hall, a wide straight staircase, a drawing room, business room and spacious bedrooms.

Sir Thomas married his cousin, Margaret, daughter of Robert, second viscount Arbuthnot, by whom he had twenty-one children, of whom five died young. He was succeeded by his eldest son,

XVI

Sir Alexander Burnett of Leys, 4th Baronet, (1714-58). He married Helen, daughter of Robert Burnett of Cowsoun, known as the "Tutor of Leys," who had been guardian of his father during his minority. She was able to bring to Sir Alexander a very considerable fortune, which was the means of saving the Leys estate from the insolvent condition in which the previous Baronet had left it. This was only accomplished after much litigation and by the sacrifice of Muchalls and other properties.

Sir Alexander had two sons and four daughters. His eldest son was killed by a splinter of rock in the course of operations to drain the Loch of Leys, and he was therefore succeeded by his second son.

XVII

Sir Robert Burnett of Leys, 5th Baronet, (1758-59) remained in possession but little more than a year and died unmarried. His death was the signal for a contest over the succession, and protracted litigation, which was finally settled in favor of Thomas, son of Sir William Burnett of Criggie, who became

XVIII

Sir Thomas Burnett of Leys, 6th Baronet, (1759-83). He married Katherine, daughter of Charles Ramsay, third son of Sir Charles Ramsay of Balmain, and had four sons and one daughter.

This Baronet is of particular interest to the descendants of William Burnett and Helen Leighton, for William came to Crathes in 1764, while Sir Thomas was in possession. Whether he was Factor to Sir Thomas, as well as to Sir Robert, his successor, is not known. It is certain that he filled that post for Sir Robert.

XIX

Sir Robert Burnett of Leys, 7th Baronet, (1783-1837) was an officer in the 21st Royal North British Fusiliers, and was taken prisoner at Saratoga when Gen. Burgoyne surrendered to Gen. Gates in 1777.

On his father's death, in 1783, Sir Robert left the army and soon afterward married Margaret, daughter of Gen. Robert Drum. In 1807 he purchased Mills of Drum, thus adding to the Leys estate and to the responsibilities of his Factor, William Burnett, whose biography will be found in Chapter 16.

Sir Robert had five sons, three of whom succeeded to the title. His fourth son, Capt. William Burnett, born in 1798, was a distinguished officer in the Royal Navy. For the latter's biography see Chapter 15.

XX

Sir Thomas Burnett of Leys, 8th Baronet, (1837-49) eldest son of Sir Robert, was a prominent agriculturist and breeder of Aberdeenshire polled cattle. He held the post of Lord Lieutenant of Kincardineshire. He died unmarried and was succeeded by his brother,

XXI

Sir Alexander Burnett of Leys, 9th Baronet, (1849-56), who died unmarried and was succeeded by his brother,

XXII

Sir James Horn Burnett of Leys, 10th Baronet, (1856-76), youngest son of the 7th Baronet. He was an advocate, a Writer to the Signet and Lord Lieutenant of Kincardineshire for thirteen years. It was he who finally drained the Loch of Leys and found the bark still fresh on the foundation timbers which had been under water for more than five centuries.

He married (1st) Caroline Margaret, daughter of Charles Spearman of Thornley Hall, county Durham, by whom he had two sons; and (2nd) his cousin-german, Lauderdale, daughter of Sir Alexander Ramsay of Balmain, by whom he had two sons and one daughter.

XXIII

Sir Robert Burnett of Leys, 11th Baronet, (1876-94), was educated at Oxford and subsequently emigrated to America, where he married Matilda Josephine, daughter of James Murphy, Esq., of New York. He had one son, who died in infancy.

Before his succession he was the owner of a ranch of twenty-five thousand acres in Southern California, devoted exclusively to raising sheep. He told a friend that he hoped he would never come into the title, as he much preferred to be a sheep-raiser in California than a Baronet in Scotland. It can be imagined what his Scotch friends must have thought of his taste — if they ever heard of it. But what a "boost" for Southern California! It is to be hoped that the local Chamber of Commerce duly capitalized it.

Incidentally, it may be recorded that Sir Robert's investment in California real estate proved profitable enough to satisfy even a thrifty Scot. He bought the land in 1860 for $3,000, operated it for thirteen years and then leased it at a good rental when he returned to Scotland. A dozen years later, in 1885, he sold it to the lessee for $140,000.

This former sheep ranch is now the site of more than a dozen thriving cities and towns, several dozen industrial plants, including large aircraft factories, a five million dollar University, a race track, extensive oil fields, a large refinery and the municipal airport of Los Angeles.

XXIV

Sir Thomas Burnett of Leys, 12th Baronet, (1894-1926) was a brother of the above. He was Col. of the Royal Horse Artillery; Lord-Lieutenant of Kincardineshire; Justice of the Peace and Deputy Lieutenant, County Aberdeen; and President Kincardineshire Territorial Army Association. He was a member of the Council of the New Spalding Club, and an important contributor to the Club's History of The Family of Burnett of Leys with Collateral Branches, from which much of the information in this volume has been obtained.

He married Mary Elizabeth, daughter of James Cumine, Esq., of Rattray, county Aberdeen, and Harriet Hay Cumine, daughter of Thomas Burnett of the Monboddo branch, by whom he had two sons and two daughters.

XXV

Maj.-Gen. Sir James Lauderdale Gilbert Burnett of Leys, 13th Baronet, (1926-) eldest son of Sir Thomas, is the present proprietor and one of the most distinguished of the Leys line. His biography will be found in Chapter 13.

¹In Scotland, up to 1 January, 1600, the year began on the 25 of March. So that previous to 1600, when you see a date like 15 January, 1562, it really means a date that we should now call 15 January, 1563. It is therefore usual, when such a date occurs, to give the double year, and write 1562-63.

Paternally Burnetts

I

Sir Alexander Ramsay of Balmain, 1st Baronet, was the second son of Sir Thomas Burnett, 6th Baronet of Leys, who, by virtue of a settlement in connection with his marriage to Katherine, sister of Sir Alexander Ramsay, 6th Baronet of Balmain, had become heir of line of the Ramsays of Balmain.

The Ramsays of Balmain were the descendants of John Ramsay, the favorite of James III, who was with the King at Lauder Bridge in 1452 and only escaped the fate of the King's other attendants on the plea of his youth. Soon afterwards he was created Lord Bothwell. He was forfeited by James IV but later was allowed to return to Scotland and restored to a large part of his estates, though not to his title, and received into royal favor. However, he kept up a confidential correspondence with Henry VIII of England, informing him of all the secrets of the Scottish court.

The lands of Balmain and Fasque, and others in Kincardineshire, erected into a barony in his favor in 1510, were inherited by his descendants, of whom Sir Gilbert was made a Baronet of Nova Scotia in 1625.

Sir Alexander Ramsay, 6th Baronet, died without issue in 1806 and his estates passed to the immediate younger brother of his heir of line, viz., Alexander Burnett, second son of Sir Thomas Burnett of Leys.

Sir Alexander, born 1757, was admitted to the Scottish bar and became Sheriff of Kincardineshire in 1779. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Alexander Bannerman of Elsick, 4th Baronet. On his succession to Balmain he settled at Fasque, where he built a thirty-thousand pound mansion.

He assumed the name of Ramsay by royal license, and corresponding arms by warrant of the Lord Lyon¹, and was created a Baronet of the United Kingdom in 1806 as Sir Alexander Ramsay of Balmain. He died in 1810, having had eight sons and seven daughters, most of whom assumed the name of Ramsay, altogether dropping Burnett.

The fifth son of Sir Alexander was Edward Bannerman Ramsay, LL.D., F.R.S.E., Dean of Edinburgh, an eminent preacher, writer and scholar, whose biography will be found in Chapter 12.

The seventh son of Sir Alexander was Rear Admiral Sir William Ramsay, Royal Navy, Knight Commander of the Bath, who had a most distinguished career. For his biography see Chapter 15.

Sir Alexander's youngest daughter, Lauderdale, became the wife of Sir James Horn Burnett of Leys, 10th Baronet.

There is little else worthy of notice in this family until we come to

V

Sir Herbert Ramsay², 5th Baronet, born 6 Feb., 1868, died 22 May, 1924. He married, 3 Jan., 1902, Mabel, daughter of William Joseph Hutchinson of Aldingham, Winton, Australia, and had issue:

- I. (Sir) Alexander Burnett, present Baronet.
- II. Herbert William Alexander, born 26 May, 1907; married, 28 Mch., 1936, Bessie Billingsby, youngest daughter of Dr. Alfred Billingsby Dight of Sidney, New South Wales.
- I. Nora Marjorie, born Feb. 1905, married 5 Sept., 1928, Capt. Adrian Bazely Baltrop, M.C., Third Queen Alexandra's Own Gurkha Rifles, third son of the late Rev. Arthur Baltrop, and has issue.
- II. Constance Agnes, born 1 Oct., 1912.

VI

Sir Alexander Burnett Ramsay², 6th Baronet, son of the above, was born 26 Mch., 1903, and succeeded his father in 1924. He married, 5 Sept., 1935, Isabel Ellice, eldest daughter of the late Arthur William Whitney of Wangoola, New South Wales, Australia, and has issue:

- I. Enid Ellice, born 30 Mch., 1937.
- II. Alexander William, born 4 Aug., 1938.
- III. Patricia Thirza, born 15 Feb., 1940.

Residence: Haddon Rug, Warren, New South Wales, Australia.

¹Head of the Lyon Court, which is virtually supreme in all matters of heraldry or procedure in Scotland.

²From Burke's Peerage, Baronetage and Knightage, 1939.

I

James Burnet of Craigmyle was the son of Alexander Burnet of Leys, and immediate younger brother of Sir Thomas Burnet of Leys, 1st Baronet.

When he was about eighteen years of age he married Elizabeth Burnet, daughter and heir of Thomas Burnet of Craigmyle and Tillihaikie. This Thomas Burnet was grandson and representative of William Burnet of Craigour, Campbell and Tillihaikie, and fell at Pinkie in 1547, and was also ancestor (through a younger line) of the Baronets of Campbell, Elrick, etc. Thomas Burnet seems to have acquired Craigmyle through his mother, heiress of a family of Craigmyle of that ilk.

By his marriage to Elizabeth Burnet James Burnet acquired, besides Craigmyle and Pitmedden, many other properties, so that he was almost as considerable a laird as his brother, Sir Thomas.

Besides other issue, who died young, he had four sons and two daughters, including:

- I. Alexander, his successor in Craigmyle.
- II. Thomas of Kemnay, who founded the Burnetts of Kemnay. (See Chapter 5.)
- III. James of Lagavin and Monboddoo, who founded the Burnetts of Monboddoo. (See Chapter 6.)
- IV. Robert of Coutoun, Muchalls and Criggie, who has been already mentioned as the "Tutor of Leys." He married (1st) Jean, daughter of Mr. John Mortimer, bailie of Aberdeen, by whom he had no issue, and (2nd) Helen Arbuthnot, by whom he had three daughters.

II

Mr. Alexander Burnett of Craigmyle, eldest son of James Burnet of Craigmyle, was admitted to the bar, 1642, was a Commissioner of Supply for Aberdeen and on the Committee for War for Kincardineshire. In 1662 he was allowed to purchase indemnity for acts which might be construed as treason, for £2400.

He married Christian, daughter of Thomas Fraser of Strichen, and had two sons and three daughters.

III

Sir Alexander Burnett of Craigmyle, eldest son of the foregoing, succeeded his father about 1677. He had extensive lands, some held of the Earl of Huntley, some from the Crown, and some from Sir Thomas Burnett of Leys. His coat-of-arms was recorded in 1678, and about 1682 he was knighted by Charles II.

He married Nicolas, daughter of Peter Young of Auldbar, and had three daughters. His settlements on them, and provisions by will for their marriage, as well as a deed of entail in favor of sundry uncles, resulted in considerable litigation over the succession of his title and estate. This was finally decided in favor of the daughters, and the family is now extinct in the male line.

I

Thomas Burnet, second son of James Burnet of Craigmyle, was a "Writer" in Edinburgh — apparently a Writer to the Signet¹. He married Margaret, only child of John Pearson, merchant of Edinburgh, by whom he had two sons and a daughter, besides four other children who died in infancy.

In 1688, the year in which he died, he purchased the estate of Kemnay on Donside from Sir George Nicolson, a Lord of Session under the title of Lord Kemnay, and received a Crown charter of the Kemnay estate with the acquiescence of Sir George Nicolson and his eldest son. The mansion house of Kemnay, where he took up his residence, was built in the middle of the 17th Century, and had several remarkable features, including an unusually wide spiral staircase.

II

Thomas Burnet of Kemnay, son of the foregoing, born 1656, was a member of the Scottish bar. He had studied abroad and was well known in literary and political circles there as well as at home. For his biography see Chapter 14.

III

George Burnett of Kemnay, only son of the foregoing, married, (1st) at the age of twenty, Helen, daughter of his cousin and Guardian, Sir Alexander Burnett of Leys, 4th Baronet, and, (2nd) Janet, daughter of James Dyce of Disblair.

He made many improvements in the grounds of Kemnay House, which were reputed to be among the most beautiful in Scotland.

By his second wife he had one son and five daughters. The daughters were famous beauties in their day, and were sent on horseback from Kemnay to Edinburgh every year to a school there, attended only by a man servant. The distance must have been well over 150 miles.

IV

Alexander Burnett of Kemnay, born 1735, succeeded his father in 1780. He received part of his education at Leyden, Holland, and was secretary to the Ambassador to the Prussian Courts. He attended Frederick the Great, by whom he was held in high esteem, during the Seven Years War, conducted the correspondence of the Embassy during the absence of the Ambassador, and was Charge d'Affaires for a year after the Ambassador's death.

He married Christian, daughter of John Leslie, professor of Greek at Aberdeen University, by whom he had two sons and four daughters.

V

John Burnett of Kemnay did much, by judicious improvements, encouragement of his tenants and the planting of extensive woods, to add to the value of the Kemnay property. He married Mary, daughter of Charles Stuart of Dunearn, County Fife, and had six sons and two daughters.

His third son, George Burnett, LL.D., was a member of the Scottish bar, but is better known as a genealogist and heraldic expert. He was Lord Lyon King of Arms, the highest authority on heraldry and genealogy in Scotland, for nearly a quarter of a century, and was the author or editor of many valuable and authoritative works.

Among his other achievements was the collection of data on the Family of Burnett of Leys and Collateral Branches, mentioned opposite Chapter 2, from which the accounts of the family in this volume have been largely derived.

VI

Alexander George Burnett of Kemnay, eldest son of George Burnett, succeeded his father in 1847. He married, 1st, Letitia Amelia, daughter of William Kendall of Bourton, Gloucestershire, by whom he had two sons and two daughters; and, 2nd, Anna, daughter of Rev. E. Pledge, by whom he had three sons and one daughter; and, 3rd, Emily Julia, daughter of Joseph Burch of Tuddenham Hall, Ipswich.

One of the sons by his first wife was William Kendall Burnett, M.A., Advocate in Aberdeen, an excellent genealogist, and compiler of the Genealogical Tree of the Family of Burnett of Leys and Collateral Branches which accompanies the authoritative volume on The Family of Burnett of Leys mentioned opposite the beginning of Chapter 2.

VII

John Alexander Burnett of Kemnay², eldest son of the foregoing, was born in 1852 and died 1935. He was educated at Oxford and Edinburgh Universities. He served in World War I, 1914-18, and was awarded the Croix de Guerre.

He married Charlotte Susan, daughter of Arthur Forbes Gordon of Rayne, County Aberdeen, by whom he had four sons and two daughters. All of the sons attained distinction, as follows:

I. Arthur Moubray Burnett, who succeeded his father.

II. Air Chief Marshal Sir Charles Stuart Burnett. (See biography, Chapter 15.)

III. Major Thomas Leslie Forbes Burnett, born 1885, Member of the Order of the British Empire, and in World War I served in the Royal Air Force, 1914-18.

- IV. Admiral Sir Robert Lindsay Burnett. (See biography, Chapter 15.)

VIII

Arthur Moubray Burnett of Kemnay was born in 1878, and succeeded his father in 1935. He was educated at Rugby School, and was a Midshipman, Royal Naval Reserve, serving on His Majesty's transports from India to China during the Boxer rising, 1900-01. He died 10 July, 1948.

In World War I he served in East Africa with Calcutta Volunteer Battery, 1914, and in 1915 joined First Battalion King's African Rifles and served as Captain and Company Commander until 1917, when invalided to India; then on staff of General Officer Commanding, Brigade Office, Bombay, until Armistice.

Helped recruit Aberdeenshire Home Guard and held the rank of Major, 1941; helped recruit Aberdeenshire Army Cadet Force, 1944, and became Lieutenant-Colonel in command of Second Battalion.

Formerly partner, Perman & Hynd, brokers, Calcutta.

Member of the Territorial Army Association of Aberdeenshire, and of Scottish North Eastern Area, Army Cadet Force.

Justice of the Peace, Aberdeenshire, 1938; member of the Council of the county of Aberdeenshire; Deputy Lieutenant for County of Aberdeen, 1946.

Member Royal Northern (Aberdeen) Club.

Married, 1 Oct., 1921, Muriel Langham, daughter of late Colonel Henry Speed Andrew Speed, Royal Engineers, of Enmore, Somerset, and has issue:

- I. Susan Letitia, born 16 Oct., 1922; married Frederick James Milton, late Royal Air Force, Orange Free State, South Africa, and has issue:

i. Timothy Jan Frederick, born 16 Feb., 1946, died 21 Oct., 1948.

ii. Letitia Irene, born 1 Dec., 1947.

- II. Jean Muriel Moubray, born 31 May, 1926; married 2 Nov., 1946, Ronald Charles Hicks, Capt. Royal Artillery, and has issue:

i. Robert Moubray, born 24 Aug., 1947.

Seat: Kemnay House, Kemnay, County Aberdeen.

¹For explanation of "Writer to the Signet" see Chapter 17.

²From Burke's Landed Gentry, 1939.

Robert Burnet, Lord Crimond (1592-1661). Sir Thomas Burnet of Leys, 1st Baronet, had two brothers of note — James Burnet of Craigmyle, who has been already noticed (see Chapter 4), and Robert Burnet, Lord Crimond, father of the famous Gilbert Burnet, Bishop of Salisbury.

Robert Burnet of Crimond was an eminent lawyer at the Scottish bar, a man of great learning, and high moral and religious principles.

He was born in 1592, and at an early age spent seven years in France prosecuting his studies. He was admitted to the bar in 1617, and was most successful, enabling him to acquire several estates, including Crimond in Aberdeenshire, which became his residence. But he never took a fee from a poor man or the clergy.

On account of his opposition to the Covenant he was compelled to leave the Kingdom on three occasions and to remain in exile at one time for five years. On his return to Scotland he lived in retirement on his estate, as his principles would not permit him to accept employment offered under Cromwell. At the Restoration, when Charles II came to the throne, he was made a Judge of the Court of Session under the title of Lord Crimond, but lived only a few months after his appointment.

He married, (1st) Beatrice, daughter and co-heiress of William Maule of Glaster, and had by her one daughter who died in infancy. He married, (2nd) Rachel, daughter of James Johnston, merchant in Edinburgh, and sister of Sir Archibald Johnston, Lord Warristoun, by whom he had five sons and one daughter. Three of his sons died unmarried, and the two others left no descendants in the male line, so far as known, so that the Crimond line is now extinct.

The fourth son of Lord Crimond, Sir Thomas Burnet, born in 1638, was physician successively to Charles II, James II, William III and Anne, and the author of various medical works.

The youngest son was Gilbert Burnet, Bishop of Salisbury, undoubtedly the most distinguished member of the Burnett family. An account of him and his descendants will be found in Chapters 10 and 15.

The Monboddo Branch of the Burnett family descends from James Burnet of Craigmyle, the immediate younger brother of Sir Thomas Burnet of Leys, 1st Baronet.

I

James Burnet of Lagavin, county Kincardine, was the third son of James Burnet of Craigmyle. He married, (1st) Isabel Forbes, who died without issue, and, (2nd) Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Irvine of Monboddo, by whom he had two sons and three daughters.

He purchased the old estate of Monboddo from the brothers of his second wife, and also acquired six other estates.

II

Alexander Burnet of Monboddo married his cousin Margaret, daughter of Sir Alexander Burnet of Leys, 2nd Baronet, by whom he had one son and two other children who died in infancy.

III

James Burnet of Monboddo, son of the above, born 1688, married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir William Forbes of Craigievar, and had eleven sons and three daughters. All of these died young except two sons.

IV

James Burnett of Monboddo and Lagavin, son of the foregoing, was the well known Lord Monboddo, whose biography will be found in Chapter 11. He married Elizabeth Farquharson, a relative of the Earl Marischal, and had one son, who died young, and two daughters.

Helen, the elder daughter, married Kirkpatrick Williamson, who assumed the name of Burnett, and had three sons and four daughters.

V

James Burnett Burnett of Monboddo, son of Helen Burnett, and grandson of Lord Monboddo, was born 1792 and died 1864. He married Jane, daughter of John Carter, and had two sons and two daughters.

VI

James Cumine Burnett of Monboddo, Honorable East India Company Service, and Captain Indian Army, Retired, born 21 Mch., 1835, died 9 April, 1905. Was the eldest son of the above. He was Justice of the Peace and Deputy Lieutenant of Kincardineshire. He married Georgina Keith, and had three sons and three daughters.

VII

James Shank Burnett-Burnett of Monboddo, eldest son of the foregoing, was born 23 Dec., 1868, and succeeded his father in 1905. He was killed by an elephant in Southern India 19 Dec., 1910. He married, 1906, Cecelia Barnes, and had issue:

1. Elizabeth Mary. Born 13 Feb., 1898; died 4 May 1900.
2. James Malcolm. Born 6 Oct., 1899. (See below.)
3. Cecelia Daphne May. Born 13 Mch., 1903. Married, 23 April, 1934, Dennis Marescaux Lees, now Acting Read Admiral, Royal Navy, Distinguished Service Order and bar, and had issue:
 - i. David Brian. Born 23 Nov., 1936.
 - ii. Jeremy Marescaux. Born 19 June, 1938.
 - iii. Rodney Burnett. Born 31 Dec., 1944.
4. William Arthur.

VIII

James Malcolm Burnett. Born 6 Oct., 1899. Succeeded his father 1910. Married, 2 June, 1942, Gladys Ingram of Aberdeen.

Seat: Monboddo, Fordoun, Kincardineshire, Scotland.

Crathes Castle, the seat of the family of Burnett of Leys, stands in fine woods, on high ground, looking down on the Valley of the River Dee, in the town of Banchory, Kincardineshire. It is fifteen miles from Aberdeen, and is surrounded by an estate of about 13,400 acres. It is more than a mile from the porter's lodge to the house, through a beautiful park. The winding driveway is lined with fine trees, and in the vicinity of the Castle are extensive gardens, with unique hedges nearly 300 years old.

This is border country, between the Highlands and the Lowlands, and in the early days was subject to raids by the lawless Highlanders, who used to come down and try to drive off the cattle.

When I visited Crathes, in June, 1900, the park and grounds were exceedingly well kept, and the Castle was of fascinating interest. The head of the family at that time was Sir Thomas Burnett, 12th Baronet, a Colonel in the Royal Horse Artillery, Retired, and very much the Scottish gentleman. He was alone; his wife and daughter were on a visit to Paris, and his son was fighting in South Africa with the Gordon Highlanders, in which he held a commission as a Lieutenant.

Sir Thomas received me very courteously, invited me to dinner, and showed me all over the Castle. He told me it was commenced in 1553 and finished about 1596. He said that Scottish castles of that date have a type of their own, differing in many respects from the contemporary buildings of the same kind in France, which they most resemble.

Crathes may be described as one of the earliest, as well as most beautiful of what Messrs. McGibbon and Ross¹ call the fourth period² of Scottish castellated architecture. Improvements in artillery had caused the abandonment of the idea of building castles strong enough to resist a regular siege. All that was aimed at was an amount of fortification sufficient for protection against a sudden attack; and Crathes, like other castles of the same date, was more an ornamental mansion than a proper fortress.

The wall runs up conspicuously plain to a considerable height, burgeoning out in the upper stories into a profusion of picturesque corbelled and gargoyle turrets, some round, some square, with slated roofs, and finials and other elaborate decorations. A corbelled turret, rising about half way up the wall, supports an embattled balcony. The ancient doorway on the east side remains, though closed up, and to the left of it ascends what used to be the principal staircase, which stops short at the third floor and is continued inside the turret already mentioned.

The exterior appearance is somewhat marred by an incongruous addition built at the beginning of the 18th Century, and containing, among other things, a new doorway and entrance hall, a wide straight staircase, a drawing room, business room and spacious bedrooms. This was a concession to the demand for more comforts and luxuries which had been gradually finding their way into the mansions of that day.

The basement is vaulted, and a narrow round stair connects between the cellar and the hall. The great barrel-vaulted hall, 30 x 18½ feet, on the first floor, now the dining room, occupies the western part of the old building.

The ceilings of three bedrooms on the second and third floors are decorated with quite remarkable colored paintings in the German style bearing the date 1599. The ceiling of one room has nine panels, each panel containing the painting of a knight, with coat-of-arms, and the beams between being decorated with mottoes, chiefly from Scripture, in German text. This room is known as the "Room of the Nine Nobles," or "Worthies," and Sir Thomas told me that in the Imperial Castle of Runkelstein, in the Austrian Tyrol, he had seen exactly the same figures dating about two hundred years earlier.

The Nobles are in three groups. First the three greatest Pagan heroes, Hector of Troy, Alexander the Great and Julius Caesar; then the three greatest heroes in Jewish history, Joshua, David and Judas Maccabaeus; and finally the three best Christian Kings — Arthur of England, Charlemagne and Godfrey de Bouillon.

Another room is known as the "Chamber of the Muses," with eleven emblematic figures, with mottoes, and another is the "Room of the Green Lady," so called because of a ghost story connected with it.

For more than a generation these remarkable ceilings were covered with lath and plaster — probably to make the rooms warmer in this cold Northern climate. They were exposed to view and carefully restored by Sir Robert Burnett, 11th Baronet, the California sheep raiser referred to in Chapter 2 — possibly at the instigation of his American wife.

Above the Chamber of the Muses and extending along the whole breadth of the building from east to west, is a long gallery, popularly called the "Chapel," although there is no evidence that it has ever been used for religious purposes. The ceiling extends into the roof, the slope of which is finely panelled in oak. Here are found colored armorial coats, including the Royal Arms of Scotland; the arms of the Marquis of Hamilton; of the Chancellor Seton, Earl of Dunfermline (a nephew of Canon Hamilton); of Burnett impaled with Gordon of Lesmoir (the wife of the laird of Leys who completed the Castle). The holly leaf and hunting horn of the Burnett coat-of-arms are used as occasional decorative features.

Painted ceiling in the Room of the Nine Nobles, Crathes Castle.

In the early days of the Castle the Barony Courts were frequently held in this room, but an inventory taken in 1760 indicates that it was then used as a lumber room. This was undoubtedly because in the addition built by the 3rd Baronet a new set of public rooms was provided, and the Gallery gradually fell into disuse and poor repair.

Dining room in Crathes Castle.

In 1896, just a few years before my visit, Sir Thomas had the room repaired and restored and made into one of the most beautiful and interesting features of the Castle. He also added shields with the armorial bearings of all the families with whom the Burnett family had intermarried from time to time, in chronological order, — seventeen in all.

Armorial bearings are also to be found on the exterior of the Castle, beautifully carved in stone, with the dates that the Castle was begun and finished. These are mostly arms of the ladies of Leys, notably Janet Hamilton, wife of Sir Alexander Burnet, who commenced the Castle, and Katherine Gordon, wife of the Alexander who completed it, impaled³ with the arms of Burnett.

In the Castle there are a number of family portraits, including one of Gilbert Burnet, Bishop of Salisbury, who was the most eminent member of the family. Many of these paintings, including one of Sir Thomas Burnet, 1st Baronet, are by George Jameson, famous portrait painter in the early part of the 17th Century, who also painted portraits of James VI, Charles I and the great Marquis of Montrose, and was known as "the Scottish Van Dyke." Others are by Hoppner, Hogarth and Frith.

The portrait of Bishop Burnet is by Sir Godfrey Kneller, famous painter of the 17th and 18th Centuries, who painted ten reigning sovereigns, and all persons of rank, wealth and eminence of his day.

The silver and china of course bear the Burnett crest and motto; and in a small glass case is the hunting horn supposed to have been given by King Robert the Bruce to Alexander Burnard as a "horn of tenure," and a sign that he was the King's forester in the north. This is the horn which appears in the family coat-of-arms, together with the holly leaves, which are known in heraldry as "Burnet leaves." See Chapter 9.

I found Sir Thomas quite keen on family history, and much interested in my efforts to trace the ancestry of my great grandfather, in which he offered to assist. He said he had been contributing quite largely to a book about the Burnett family which was about to be issued by the New Spalding Club of Aberdeen. (See Note opposite beginning of Chapter 2.)

Sir Thomas told me that for recreation at Crathes they fish for salmon, and shoot grouse, partridge, woodcock and roe deer, and that some stag horns found in the loch when it was drained were of a species now extinct.

COAT-OF-ARMS OF BURNETT OF LEYS Chapter 9

Arms — Argent, three holly leaves in chief, vert, and a hunting horn in base sable, garnished gules.

(On a silver shield three green holly leaves above a black hunting horn with red trimmings.)

Crest — A hand with a knife, pruning a vine tree.

Supporters — A highlander in hunting garb, and a greyhound, proper. (Natural colors.)

Motto — Veriscit vulnere virtus. (Virtue flourishes from a wound.)

The Burnett arms are very ancient. The holly leaves owe their origin to the similar emblems borne by Odo Burnard in the 12th Century. (See Chapter 1.) The hunting horn refers to the fact that in 1323 Alexander Burnard was the King's forester in the North. (See Chapter 2.)

Sir George Mackenzie, in his Science of Heraldry, says:

"Burnet carries a hunting horn in his shield, and a Highlander in hunting garb and greyhounds for his supporters to shew that he was His Majesty's Forester in that northern forest."

The crest and motto also have an interesting history. It is said that they owe their origin to Mary, Queen of Scots, and were probably intended to allude to her own unhappy condition. "When she was in England," says Bell in his Life of the Scottish Queen, "she embroidered for the Duke of Norfolk a hand with a sword in it, cutting vines, with the motto 'Veriscit vulnere virtus.' "

The foregoing refers to the arms of the main family of Burnett of Leys. There are many slight variations, by different branches and individuals. In the arms of Bishop Gilbert Burnet the leaves are described as "Burnet-leaves."

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

The United States is a country with a rich and diverse history. It is a country that has been shaped by the dreams and aspirations of many people from different backgrounds and cultures. The story of the United States is a story of growth, change, and progress. It is a story that has inspired people around the world.

of ivory, fluted, with four bands of gilt round it, the two center ones containing a carbunkle and three pieces of transparent crystal. Attached to it is a scarf or baldric of green silk, tasselled, apparently of the time of Charles II. There is no documentary history of the horn, nor any allusion to it in any of the Leys charters. All that is known of it is that it has been from time immemorial in the possession of the family, and is believed to be a badge of office as forester, or a horn of service.

"Cornage," or the service of a horn, was among the various methods in use for the conveyance of land in England as far back as the middle of the 11th Century, and it is not impossible that the horn of Leys may have been somewhat of the same character as the English charter horns, and other horns, some of which are still in existence.

GILBERT BURNET, BISHOP OF SALISBURY Chapter 10

Bishop Burnet was the youngest son of Robert Burnet, Lord Crimond, and a nephew of Sir Thomas Burnet of Leys, 1st Baronet.

It would be beyond the scope of this brief biography to enter into a detailed history of this celebrated prelate. Still, a volume devoted to the Burnett family would hardly be complete without something more than a passing mention of its most distinguished member. The family may well be proud of having produced a son of such eminent talents, unswerving honesty of purpose, and, above all, toleration in a corrupt and intolerant age.

Honesty was certainly not the prevailing fashion among politicians of his time, and in that respect the Bishop stood out in bold relief among those who, while holding office under William and Mary and their successor, were more or less involved in treasonable correspondence with the exiled family. The foibles and weaknesses of the Bishop's character have been handled with such virulence by his enemies that posterity can afford to treat them with leniency, counter-balanced as they were by his many virtues. Many of the most violent lampoons and satires of the day were directed against him on account of the tolerant spirit he displayed towards other religious bodies — a trait which would hardly be considered deserving of censure at the present time.

Gilbert Burnet was born in Edinburgh on the 18th of September 1643. He received his early education from his father, Lord Crimond, who was then in retirement owing to his refusal to accept preferment under Cromwell, and, under his tuition, made marvellous progress. At nine years of age he could read Latin with ease, and was sent to Marischal College, Aberdeen, where he studied, with great success, Greek, Mathematics and Philosophy, and was made Master of Arts in 1657, before he was fourteen years of age.

In 1663 he spent six months in England, and visited the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, and, in the following year, travelled in Holland and France. During this tour he mixed with men of all religious denominations and acquired that intense hatred of all forms of religious persecution which distinguished him through life.

THEORY OF THE EARTH AND ITS HISTORY

The theory of the earth and its history is a branch of geology which deals with the origin and development of the earth and its various parts. It is a science which seeks to explain the processes which have shaped the earth and its features, and to determine the time and sequence of these processes. The theory of the earth and its history is based on the study of the earth's rocks and fossils, and on the principles of geology.

On his return to Scotland he was ordained as priest of the Church of England and given a charge at Saltoun, East Lothian.

In 1669 he was appointed Professor of Divinity at the University of Glasgow, and removed to that town, where he remained for four years and a half. Here he married, in 1669, Lady Margaret, daughter of John, 6th Earl of Cassillis, by whom he had no family.

In 1672 he wrote A Vindication of the Authority, Constitution, and Laws of the Church and State of Scotland, and was offered a bishopric in Scotland, which he declined.

In 1675 he resigned his chair at the University and settled in London. Here he remained nine years, during which he became celebrated as a preacher, and was appointed Chaplain to the Rolls, and Lecturer at St. Clement's.

In 1679 he published the first volume of his History of the Reformation. At this time, when the inquiry into the so-called "Popish Plot" was proceeding, he was much consulted by the King, who offered him the Bishopric of Chichester. Charles, however, attached such conditions to the offer as made it impossible for a man of Burnet's independence to accept.

In his early years he lived in times that must have been very trying to a man of his high principles and hatred of intolerance. Of course Puritan England under Cromwell was anything but tolerant, and the reign of Charles II, which followed, was a succession of religious controversies and persecutions, as well as a period of grossest immorality.

The contrast between the two eras is thus graphically described by Green in his History of the English People:

"The want of poetry, of fancy, in the common Puritan temper condemned half the popular observances of England as superstitions. It was a superstition to keep Christmas, or to deck the house with holly and ivy. It was superstitious to dance around the village Maypole. It was flat Popery to eat mince-pie. The rough sport, the mirth and fun of 'Merry England,' were out of place in an England called with so great a calling . . . The long struggle between the Puritans and the playwrights ended in the closing of every theatre."

America subsequently had an example of the Puritan spirit in such enactments as the Connecticut "Blue Laws," which prohibited bear-baiting and other sports — "not because it gave pain to the bear," said Chauncey M. Depew, "but because it gave pleasure to the spectators."

And now the other side of the picture:

"The Restoration brought Charles to Whitehall; and in an instant the whole face of England was changed . . . Godliness became a by-word of scorn; sobriety in dress, in speech, in manners, was flouted as a mark of the detested Puritanism . . .

"Duelling and raking became the marks of a fine gentleman; and grave divines winked at the follies of 'honest fellows', who fought, gambled, swore, drank, and ended a day of debauchery by a night in the gutter . . . Lord Rochester was a fashionable poet, and the titles of some of his poems are such as no pen of our day could copy . . .

"The truest type of the times is the Duke of Buckingham, and the most characteristic event in the Duke's life was a duel in which he consummated his seduction of Lady Shrewsbury by killing her husband, while the Countess, in disguise as a page, held his horse and looked on at the murder . . .

"And in mere love of what was vile, in contempt of virtue and disbelief in purity and honesty, the King himself stood ahead of any of his subjects."

It was not surprising that the King's chaplain felt it to be his duty to write to His Majesty a letter of remonstrance on his conduct. This letter strikes the keynote of Burnet's character. In it, which is couched in perfectly respectful and appropriate language, he boldly rebukes the King for his mode of life, and earnestly implores him to reform his course, by dismissing those about him, "especially the women," who are the causes of his sin. He continues in lofty and eloquent language, his appeal to the King:

"Sir, this counsel is almost as necessary for your affairs as for your soul; and although you have highly offended that God Who has been infinitely merciful to you in preserving you at Worcester fight and during your long exile, and Who brought you back so miraculously, yet He is still good and gracious, and will, upon your sincere repentance and change of life, pardon all your sins and receive you into favor. Oh! Sir, what if you should die in the midst of all your sins? At the great Tribunal where you must appear there will be no regard for the crown you wear; but it will aggravate your punishment that, being in so eminent a station, you have so much dishonored God."

After this outspoken rebuke there is little cause for wonder that Burnet had few friends in high places.

And yet the writer of this letter is the man upon whom the venal politicians of the day heaped all the coarsest abuse in their extensive vocabulary, and accused of being a time server and a place hunter.

Burnet was recognized as a strong opponent of the Court party. His friend Lord Russell was unjustly accused of complicity in the "Rye House Plot" — a plan to assassinate the King and his brother James — and was beheaded. Burnet attended him upon the scaffold and later wrote a vindication of his memory.

Such open opposition was an offence not to be forgiven. He was deprived of his Chaplaincy of the Rolls and discharged from lecturing at St. Clement's.

Charles II, "who had never said a foolish thing and never done a wise one," died in 1685, and James II came to the throne. Burnet then found his position in England almost intolerable, and, after traveling for some time in France, Italy, Switzerland and Germany, finally settled at the Hague. Here he became the Chaplain of William, Prince of Orange, and his wife Mary, heir to the English throne, and formed an attachment to them which endured during the remainder of his life.

Meantime, in England, James was pursuing a policy of despotism, tyranny and persecution which has had few equals. He tried to efface Parliament, to rescind the right of Habeas Corpus, to over-awe the clergy and insidiously to establish Papacy as the religion of the Kingdom. The unspeakable Chief Justice Jeffries, most brutal of men, boasted that in the service of James he had hanged more traitors than all his predecessors since the Conquest.

The King's attitude is reflected in the following colloquy which ensued when he instructed the young Duke of Somerset to introduce the Papal Nuncio into the Presence Chamber.

"I am advised," said the Duke, "that I cannot obey your Majesty without breaking the law."

"Do you not know that I am above the law?" the King asked angrily.

"Your Majesty may be, but I am not," was the cool retort, which cost the Duke his post.

Three years of this was enough to prepare the way for the Revolution of 1688, to which Gilbert Burnet's zeal and energy in no small degree contributed, and which placed William and Mary on the throne. He returned to England with them and preached their Coronation sermon. William created him Bishop of Salisbury, made him a Chancellor of the Order of the Garter, and frequently sought his advice on matters of State.

He was Chairman of the committee of the House of Lords to which the Bill of Rights was referred, and had in his possession the original Magna Charta granted by King John at Runnymede. In all his activities he never lost his zeal for religious and civil toleration, in which he was at least 150 years ahead of his time.

The Bishop's death occurred in 1715, in his seventy-second year. He is buried beneath the altar of St. James's Church at Clerkenwell, where a white marble monument has been erected to his memory.

His life covered some of the most interesting and significant periods in English history. He lived under seven monarchs, from Charles I to George I, and also under Cromwell's Commonwealth. He was a contemporary of Sir Isaac Newton, who discovered the law of gravitation and created a new theory of the universe, William Harvey, who discovered the circulation of the blood, and Marlborough, "The Iron Duke," who was one of England's greatest soldiers. He saw the publication of Milton's Paradise Lost and Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, the triumph of the freedom of the press, enactment of the Habeas Corpus law and the Bill of Rights, and the end of the long struggle between the Crown and Parliament, with the granting to the House of Commons of the exclusive right to appropriate money, by which the government of England became actually a government of the people.

During the latter part of his life English literature assumed a new splendor, with the writings of Steele, Sterne, Swift, Defoe and Fielding, and with Addison's Spectator on every breakfast table.

His own voluminous writings were of great importance. They were on historical, biographical and religious subjects, and comprised twenty-four works, some of them in six or seven volumes. He also left numerous manuscripts which have been preserved in the Bodleian Library and in the Harleian Collections in the British Museum.

His best known work is The History of My Own Time, which was published after his death and was mercilessly ridiculed by Dean Swift, Alexander Pope and others; but Macauley, in the second volume of his History of England, vindicates the Bishop's character for integrity and ability. The Life of John, Earl of Rochester, Dr. Johnson said "the critick should read for its elegance, the philosopher for its arguments and the saint for its piety."

There are many portraits of Bishop Burnet extant, including one at Crathes Castle, two at the University of Aberdeen, one in the National Portrait Gallery, one in the Palace at Salisbury, and a number of others.

Bishop Burnet was thrice married. The first has been already mentioned. The second, which occurred at the Hague, in 1688, was to Mrs. Mary Scott, a Dutch lady of large fortune and noble extraction. His third wife was Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Sir Richard Blake, Knight, and widow of Robert Berkeley of Spetchley, County Worcester. It has been said that "his first wife was remarkable for her beauty, the second for her fortune, and the third for her piety."

By his second wife the Bishop had three sons and two daughters (all of his family except two daughters by his third wife, who died in infancy):

- I. William. Colonial Governor. See Chapter 15 for Biography.
- II. Gilbert. Educated at Oxford. In holy orders. Chaplain to George I, and rector of East Barnet. Author of treatises on theology. Died unmarried in 1726.
- III. (Sir) Thomas, born 1694. Educated at Oxford. Employed in the diplomatic service, and appointed secretary for the King to the Diet at Ratisbon, and afterwards consul at Lisbon for several years. Studied law and in 1741 was made one of the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas, and in 1745 was made a Knight. Was known as one of the best lawyers and most upright judges on the English bench. He edited his father's work, The History of My Own Time, and was author of a memoir of the Bishop appended to that work. He died in 1753. He was unmarried.
- I. Mary. Married, 1712, David Mitchell, nephew of Admiral Mitchell, and had a son and daughter. She and her children were dead without issue in 1788.
- II. Elizabeth, married Lord Chancellor West of Ireland, and had a son Richard West, the poet, friend of Gay and of Horace Walpole, who died without issue; and a daughter Mary, who married John Williams of Pembroke and had a son who in 1789 was Vicar of Wellisbourne in Warwickshire, and father of three children. If any of his descendants survive they would seem to be the sole remaining descendants of Bishop Burnet in the United Kingdom, but of course Mary Burnet Browne, daughter of Gov. William Burnet and granddaughter of the Bishop, had numerous descendants in America, as shown in Chapter 24.

James Burnet of Lagavin and Monboddo was famous as Lord Monboddo, a distinguished lawyer and Judge, and in some respects the most remarkable man of the family.

He was born in 1714, received his early education in the parish school at Laurence Kirk, and at fifteen entered college at Aberdeen. It seems to have been the custom in those days to study law abroad. Accordingly he spent three years at Groningen, Holland, studying deeply for the bar, and in 1737 was made a member of the Scottish Faculty of Advocates.

He soon acquired a great reputation, was appointed Sheriff of Kincardineshire, and in 1767 was raised to the bench, with the title of Lord Monboddo.

According to Chambers Biographical Dictionary of Eminent Scotsmen, and other authorities, in addition to being an eminent lawyer he was a man of varied accomplishments, and one of the most marked characters in Scottish literary circles. In his treatise On the Origin and Progress of Language he may be said to have anticipated the speculations of Charles Darwin and the modern science of anthropology. He was also the author of a book on Ancient Metaphysics.

He was an intimate of Dr. Johnson and other eminent men of his day, by whom he was greatly esteemed.

He died in 1799, and his life and learning were made the subject of numerous biographical notices, including one in Boswell's Life of Johnson. There is a portrait of him in the great window of Mitchell Hall, Marischal College, Aberdeen.

Lord Monboddo's younger daughter Elizabeth was a famous beauty, whose grace and accomplishments were celebrated by Robert Burns in his Address to Edinburgh, in which she is mentioned as one of the sights of the city. In reading the following stanzas it should be remembered to accent the name on the first syllable — the proper Scotch pronunciation:

"Thy daughters fair thy walks adorn,
Gay as the gilded Summer sky,
Sweet as the dewey milk-white thorn,
Dear as the raptured thrill of joy!

“Fair Burnet strikes th’adoring eye,
Heav’n’s beauties on my fancy shine:
I see the Sire of Love on high,
And own His works indeed divine.”

Burns was a frequent visitor to Lord Monboddo’s house, and almost worshipped the fair hostess. “His favorite for looks and manners,” wrote Mrs. Alison Cockburn, “is Bess Burnet — no bad judge indeed!”

In a letter to William Chalmers he describes her as “the Heavenly Miss Burnet,” and upon being asked, after his first visit, if he admired the young lady, he said, “I admired God Almighty more than ever. Miss Burnet is the most heavenly of all His works.”

She and her father were inseparable. She always accompanied him on horseback to and from Monboddo, and when she died, at the early age of twenty-five, he never fully recovered from the loss.

Burns also was grief-stricken. He wrote a feeling Elegy on her death.

Edward Bannerman Burnett, known in later years as Edward Ramsay, LL.D., F.R.S.E., Dean of Edinburgh, was the fifth son of Sir Alexander Ramsay of Balmain, 1st Baronet. Sir Alexander was a younger son of Sir Thomas Burnett of Leys, 6th Baronet, but assumed the name of Ramsay upon succeeding to the Balmain estates, as did most of his descendents. (See Chapter 3.)

Dean Ramsay was born 30 January, 1793, was educated at Durham School and Cambridge University, and was ordained in 1816. After serving as curate for some years in Somersetshire he removed to Edinburgh, where he spent the remainder of his life in various posts, and in 1846 was made Dean of the Diocese.

He was a man of many accomplishments. He wrote with great facility and excellent style; and was an admirable reader and elocutionist; an ardent florist in his youth, and to the very last an enthusiastic as well as a highly cultivated musician. As an authority on Handel he was considered hardly second to any man of his day.

Added to these gifts, the Dean possessed very courteous and genial manners, a strong sense of humor, and a singularly tolerant, kindly disposition to those who held different religious opinions from his own. He soon became very popular in Edinburgh, and his house was the resort of many distinguished strangers, as well as the most able and learned of his fellow citizens of all creeds.

His sermons were able and careful compositions, and his beautiful voice and thorough knowledge of elocution added much to their effect.

Perhaps the general public best knows Dean Ramsay by his Reminiscences of Scottish Life and Character, which is admitted to be the best collection of Scottish stories ever published. First delivered in the form of a lecture, the Reminiscences were published in book form in 1857. Edition after edition was called for, each containing much new matter, till the twenty-second was reached, in the preparation of which the author died. It was published in 1874, with an interesting memoir of the Dean by the late Professor Cosmo Innes, from which much of the material in this sketch has been taken. Since then more than a dozen editions have appeared.

In 1829 Dean Ramsay married Isabella, daughter of Rupert

Cochrane of Halifax, Nova Scotia, a lady of marked talent and strength of character, who died without issue in 1858, predeceasing her husband, whose death did not occur until 27 December, 1872.

Few men have been more missed in the Scottish Episcopal Church, or in Edinburgh society.

In 1844 Dean Ramsay was offered and declined the Bishopric of New Brunswick, in 1847 the Bishopric of Glasgow, and in 1862 the Coadjutor Bishopric of Edinburgh.

A monument to his memory, in the form of a twenty-six foot Ionic cross, was erected in Edinburgh soon after his death. It stands facing Princes Street, to the east of St. John's Church.

MAJ.-GEN. SIR JAMES LAUDERDALE

GILBERT BURNETT OF LEYS

Chapter 13

Maj.-Gen. Sir James Lauderdale Gilbert Burnett of Leys, Retired,¹ is the present head of the family, and one of its most distinguished members. He is a Companion of the Bath, Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, Distinguished Service Order, member of the King's Body Guard for Scotland, Deputy Lieutenant and Justice of the Peace for Kincardineshire.

He was born 1 April, 1880, and educated at Wellington and the Royal Military College at Sandhurst. He entered the Army in 1899 and was promoted through the various grades to Major-General in 1931. He was retired in 1935, but has been Colonel of the Gordon Highlanders since 1939.

He served in the South African War, 1899-1902, and was mentioned in despatches and awarded Queen's Medal with two clasps and King's Medal with two clasps.

In World War I, 1914-18, he was mentioned in despatches eleven times, was severely wounded and received the Distinguished Service Order. He commanded a company of cadets at Sandhurst Military College 1915-16, and was Lieutenant-Colonel 1st Gordon Highlanders, 1917, when he was again mentioned in despatches and again awarded the Distinguished Service Order and bar, made an Officier Legion d'Honneur, a Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, and promoted to Brevet Colonel.

He was a Brigadier-General in command of the 186th Infantry Brigade, 1917-19; Instructor Senior Officers' School, 1919-22; commanded Second Battalion Gordon Highlanders, 1923-26; commanded 14th Infantry Brigade, Shanghai Defense Force, 1927-28; 153rd (Black Watch and Gordon) Infantry Brigade, Territorial Army, 1928-30; 8th Infantry Brigade, 1930-31; 51st (Highland) Division, Territorial Army, 1931-35.

He married, 10 July, 1913, Sybil Aird (President Aberdeenshire Branch, Soldiers' and Sailors' Families Association), daughter of the late William Crozier Smith of Whitehall and St. Boswell, New Brunswick, and has had issue:

- I. James Gilbert Alexander, born 17 April, 1914, educated at Winchester and Oxford; died 17 Mch., 1934.
- II. Roger William Odo, born 19 Aug., 1920. Captain Scots Guards. Killed in action 16 Feb., 1945, World War II.
- I. Elizabeth Rohays Mary, born 30 Aug., 1916. Married (1st) Honorable Henry Cecil and had four sons; (2nd) Captain Cecil Boyd Rochfort.

It is interesting to note that Roger William Odo Burnett was the first member of the family - at least in the direct line - to bear the names of the Saxon ancestors mentioned in Chapter I.

The Leys estate comprises about 13,400 acres, and there are three residences — Crathes Castle, Aberdeen; Woodend House and Cairntoun, Banchory.

A recent letter from Sir James to the author contains the following interesting comments:

“This has been a sad war for our family. With my boy’s death the direct line will come to an end. My brother, who is only one year younger than I am, is the heir to the Baronetcy, and after him it passes to Alexander Ramsay in Australia, who is already a Baronet.

“The property goes to my daughter’s second son, James Comyn Amherst Cecil. This is because the eldest son is a possible, but unlikely heir to the Amherst Peerage, which might prevent him taking the name Burnett, as I have stipulated.

“I have missed my brother out, with his consent, in order to avoid the death duties, which are so heavy.”

Thomas Burnet of Kemnay was a son of another Thomas Burnet of Kemnay, and a grandson of James Burnet of Craigmyle. He was born in 1686, was a member of the Scottish bar, and well known in political and literary circles at home and abroad.

He was one of the remarkable little court circle at Hanover in the time of the Electress Sophia. His letters to this royal lady, preserved in the Hanoverian archives, would fill a volume. His correspondence with Leibnitz, Locke and Miss Trotter (afterwards Mrs. Cockburn) is of a more serious character.

When the death of the Duke of Gloucester opened to the Electress the possible prospect of succession to the English throne, Thomas Burnet returned home with secret instructions to carry her sentiments to some of the leading men in England. He went thence to Paris a few months before the War of the Spanish Succession broke out.

At the instance of some of the adherents of the French court, to whom he had become obnoxious on account of his relations with the Electress, he was arrested on a frivolous pretext and hurried off to the Bastille, where he remained for a year and a half.

With the aid of the Electress, and the powerful advocacy of her niece, the Duchess of Orleans, sister-in-law to Louis XIV, he was finally released, and returned to Scotland.

At about the age of 57 he married the young and beautiful Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Brickinden of Inkpen, Berks., and settled at Kemnay. By this lady he had one son and one daughter. He died in 1729.

OTHER EMINENT MEMBERS OF THE LEYS FAMILY

Chapter 15

The family of Burnett of Leys and collateral branches contributed many distinguished names to the history of the British Empire — in government, diplomacy, the church, the law, literature, and especially in the armed services.

In addition to those in the five preceding chapters, the reader will have noted many others in the historical and genealogical records in Chapters 2 to 7 inclusive.

Besides all these there are several others worthy of special notice, who will be found in the present chapter.

William Burnet, Colonial Governor

William Burnet was the eldest son of the famous Gilbert Burnet, Bishop of Salisbury. He was born at The Hague in 1688. His godfather was William, Prince of Orange, afterwards King of England. He was educated at Cambridge as a gentleman commoner.

He was Comptroller-General of Customs in England, and in 1720 was appointed Colonial Governor of New York and New Jersey. Of his administration, Marius Schoonmaker, in his History of Kingston, says:

“Gov. Burnet governed satisfactorily to the people, and with disinterestedness. He early saw the importance of diverting the Indian trade from Canada, and for that purpose established a trading post at Oswego.”

Thus he was the first to plant the English standard on the Great Lakes. Later he built a fort at Oswego, and, as the Assembly had not provided enough money, he advanced part of the cost out of his own resources.

At the time of his appointment the Province of New York had a population of 31,000 whites and 4,000 negroes.

In 1727 he was transferred to Massachusetts which had recently been at war with the Indians, with the price of Indian scalps fixed by the General Court at £100 for male scalps and £50 for women and children.

He was also made Governor of New Hampshire.

He did not live long to enjoy his new honors, but died in 1729, at the early age of forty-one.

He was a man of superior talents and accomplishments, and an honest and able administrator. His astronomical observations were published in the Transactions of the Royal Society.

Gov. Burnet married, (1st) Maria, daughter of Dr. George Stanhope, Dean of Canterbury, by whom he had a son Gilbert; and, (2nd) Anna Maria, daughter of Abraham Van Horne of New York, by whom he had two sons and a daughter, his children being as follows:

- I. Gilbert, born 1714, who had issue:
 - i. Thomas, born 1740. Surgeon at Chigwell, county Essex; to Margaret _____ (who died at Chigwell 1811 aged 83.)
 - ii. Mary, who died unmarried in 1795.
- II. William. In holy orders. Died unmarried.
- III. Thomas. In the Army. Died unmarried.
- I. Mary. Married Hon. William Browne of Salem, New England, in 1737.

It will be seen that Gov. Burnet left no male descendants to perpetuate the name, so far as known, but his daughter, Mary Burnet Browne, left a number of descendants in Virginia, who will be mentioned in Chapter 24.

Rear Admiral Sir William Ramsay, R. N., K. C. B.

William Burnett, who later assumed the name of Ramsay, was a son of Sir Alexander Ramsay of Balmain, 1st Baronet, who was a son of Sir Thomas Burnet of Leys but assumed the name of Ramsay upon succeeding to the Balmain estates, as related in Chapter 3.

William was born in 1793 and received his early education at Durham School and Gosport Naval Academy, having entered the Royal Navy when only thirteen years of age.

In 1831, while a Lieutenant in command of the Black Joke, a small and poorly armed brig with only forty-four men, he boarded and captured a large and well armed Spanish slaver with a picked crew of seventy, and freed 496 slaves.

This exploit occupies a prominent place in Giffard's Deeds of Naval Daring, and resulted in the immediate promotion of Ramsay and his mate. In 1845, as Captain Ramsay, he was given command of the Terrible, the largest steam vessel in the Royal Navy, and for four years was senior naval officer in the Adriatic.

During the Crimean War he commanded the Hogue, a line of battle ship, in the Baltic, and was present at the capture of Bormarsund. At the conclusion of the war he was made a Companion of the Bath and thanked by the Secretary of War.

He was Chairman of the Committee on Steam Machinery, and author of the article on "Seamanship" in the Eighth edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica. In 1869 he received the distinction of Knight Commander of the Bath.

He died at Edinburgh in 1871.

Capt. William Burnett, R. N.

Capt. William Burnett, Royal Navy, was the fourth son of Sir Robert Burnett of Leys, 7th Baronet. He was born in 1798 and entered the Navy at thirteen years of age.

He served during the French and American Wars, and took an active part in the attacks on the cities of Washington and New Orleans, being employed in the boats of the squadron.

After the war he was promoted to Lieutenant and mentioned in despatches for gallant conduct in capturing with the boats of the frigate Seringapatam, a superior force of Greek pirates, and for meritorious service on shore in Jamaica during an insurrection on that island.

In 1834 he was promoted to Captain, and died unmarried in 1840 while fitting out a twenty-four gun ship to which he had been appointed. A monument to his memory was erected in the garrison church at Portsmouth, England.

It is of interest to note that Rev. James Shirrefs of Aberdeen, father of Amelia Shirrefs, was appointed tutor to young William when he was nine years of age, and that he doubtless received his early education at Dr. Shirrefs' home of "Friendville."

Air Chief Marshal Sir Charles Stuart Burnett,
K. C. B., C. B. E., D. S. O.

Sir Charles Stuart Burnett, British Army¹, was a son of John Alexander Burnett of Kemnay, and had an outstanding military career.

He was born in 1882, and enlisted in the British Army at the age of seventeen. He served in the South African War, 1900-01, and received a commission in the Highland Light Infantry; also was awarded a medal and three clasps. In Northern Nigeria, 1904-07, he was wounded, mentioned in despatches and received a medal and four clasps.

He served in World War I, 1914-18, was mentioned in despatches, was made a Commander of the British Empire, awarded the Distinguished Service Order, and Third Class Order of the Nile. For operations in Iraq and Persia, 1920, he was mentioned in despatches and received a medal with two clasps.

He was Director of Operations and Intelligence of the Air Ministry and Deputy Chief of Air Staff, 1931-33; Air Officer Commanding Iraq Command, 1933-35; Training Command 1936-39; Inspector-General Royal Air Force, 1939-40; Chief of Air Staff, Royal Australian Air Force, 1940-42.

He retired 1942, but commanded Central Command, Air Training Corps, 1943. He was a Companion of the Bath, 1927; Knight Commander of Sweden, 1934; and Knight Commander of the Bath, 1936. He died 9 April, 1945.

In 1914 he married Sybil Bell, and had four daughters. His eldest daughter married Flight Lieutenant Marcus Swann, Royal Australian Air Force, and has a son, Charles Burnett Swann. His other daughters are unmarried.

His widow resides at Small Dean, Wendover, Bucks., England.

Admiral Sir Robert Lindsay Burnett,
R.N., K.C.B., K.B.E., D.S.O., LL.D.

Fourth son of John Alexander Burnett of Kemnay; born 1887. Entered Royal Navy via H.M.S. Britannia in 1903; specialized as a Lieutenant in physical training; served in destroyers in the Grand Fleet 1914-18, during World War I. Awarded Order of British Empire, 1923.

Commanded H.M.S. Wallflower on Africa Station, 1925-28; commanded the Destroyers in China, 1931-33; Director of Physical Training and Sports, 1933.

Flag Captain in H.M.S. Amphion and Chief of Staff to Commander-in-Chief, Africa Station, 1936-39; Commodore Royal Naval Barracks, Chatham, 1939-40; Aide-de-Camp to His Majesty the King, 1940; promoted Acting Rear Admiral in command of Special Service Squadron, 1940; promoted Rear Admiral, 1941.

Rear Admiral commanding Home Destroyer Flotillas, 1942-43; appointed Companion of the Bath, 1942, for services in command of North Russian Convoy; Flag Officer commanding Tenth Cruiser Squadron, 1943-44, employed in convoys to North Russia; awarded Distinguished Service Order, 1943, for services against enemy forces in Northern Waters.

Promoted Vice Admiral, 1943; commanded Cruiser Force in Battle of St. Stephen's Day, 1943; appointed Knight Commander of the Order of the British Empire for services in the Battle of St. Stephen's Day; awarded the Russian Order of Suvorov.

Commander-in-Chief, South Atlantic Station, 1944; appointed Knight Commander of the Bath, 1945.

Promoted to full Admiral 1946.

Appointed Commander-in-Chief, Plymouth, England, 1 Dec. 1947.

PART III

WILLIAM BURNETT BRANCH

William Burnett
Factor to Sir Robert Burnett of Leys, Seventh Baronet

On a sunny day in the Summer of 1900 I stood in the old churchyard of Banchory, in Scotland, not far from Crathes Castle, the ancient seat of the family of Burnett of Leys. I was seeking the last resting place of my great grandparents.

Many of the stones bore the Burnett name, and some were so old that I had to scrape off the moss with my cane in order to read the inscriptions. At length I found the one I sought. It was inscribed as follows:

To the Memory of
Helen Leighton, alias Burnett,
Wife of William Burnett, sometime tenant in Hirn, who died in Woodhead the 20 of November,
1817, aged 63 years

Also of the said
William Burnett
who died at Woodhead
5 May, 1829, aged 86 years

A search in the great Register House in Edinburgh failed to disclose the ancestry of William Burnett, owing to the destruction of parish records, but there is a well established tradition in the family that he was descended from a cadet, or younger son, of the family of Burnett of Leys.

Certain it is that my grandfather, Robert Burnett, used the Burnett crest, which he would not have done if he were not entitled to it.

My uncle, William Burnett, who visited Scotland in 1873 and interviewed many of the old tenants on the Crathes estate, seems to have satisfied himself of the correctness of the family tradition. This is shown by a letter to me from George Cadenhead, Esq., Advocate in Aberdeen, dated 23 June, 1896, and containing the following:

"I understand that your great grandfather, William Burnett, was descended from a cadet of the family of Leys, but cannot say how I acquired that understanding. Later on, about 1870 I think,

I heard your Uncle William assert the fact to your cousin, Lieut. Hine."

Mr. Cadenhead was a genealogist, and author of The Cadenhead Family, so that his opinion carried more than ordinary weight.

On my visit to Scotland I endeavored to trace the ancestry of William Burnett, and was assisted in my investigation by W. Kendall Burnett, Esq., an eminent genealogist, and compiler of a Genealogical Tree of the Family of Burnett of Leys and Collateral Branches.

I was also assisted by Sir Thomas Burnett of Leys, 12th Baronet, who kindly interviewed some of the tenants on his estate. But by that time so many of the old people had died that the inquiries were fruitless. In writing me the result of his search Sir Thomas was kind enough to say: "Your visit was a great pleasure to me, and I am glad to have made the acquaintance of a clansman, at all events, if not a kinsman."

William Burnett was a farmer, and also a man of education and business ability, for he was Factor¹, or Land Steward, to Sir Robert Burnett of Leys, 7th Baronet, and probably to his predecessor as well. In this position he had charge of the Crathes estate, which at that time comprised some 12,000 acres, including the town and church of Banchory, a mill and other auxiliaries, to say nothing of more than 140 tenants.

The position of Factor was frequently held by lawyers, by younger sons, and sometimes by heirs. It was a position of some importance and dignity in the community.

That he was held in high esteem is shown by the fact that he remained in office until old age compelled him to retire, and there is still a portrait of him in the office at Crathes Castle, with an inscription in the handwriting of Lady Robert Burnett, as follows:

"W. Burnett. Born 1742. Came to Crathes 1764. This print taken in 1826."

It is an interesting fact that before his accession to the title Sir Robert, as an officer of the Royal North British Fuseliers, fought in the War of the American Revolution, and was taken prisoner at Saratoga when Gen. Burgoyne surrendered to Gen. Gates in 1777. It is quite possible that John and Joseph Chipp, American soldiers, and ancestors of Warren Chipp who married Elizabeth Graham Burnett, were also present on that occasion.

William Burnett lived in an interesting period of the world's history. Among his contemporaries in Scotland were Sir Walter Scott, Robert Burns and Thomas Carlyle. In England they were the poet Gray, Dr. Johnson, Horace Walpole, William Pitt, Robert Clive, Lord Chesterfield, the Duke of Wellington and many others.

Scotland was at peace. The last war on Scottish soil was the Rebellion of 1745, when the adventurous Charles Edward Stuart — the "Bonnie Prince Charlie" of song and story — backed by Louis XIV of of France, made a daring bid for the English throne and was overwhelmingly defeated at Culloden.

William Burnett, born in 1742, was of course too young to know anything about this, but later he was to know of other wars — especially the disastrous beginning and glorious end of the Seven Years War, than which no war had greater results on the history of the world nor brought greater triumphs to England.

He doubtless joined in the general rejoicing which marked the British victories on the continent of Europe and at sea, and swelled with pride over the conquest of Canada, culminating in the fall of Quebec in 1759, and of Montreal the following year. Never had the United Kingdom played so great a part in the history of mankind.

He lived during the American Revolution, the French Revolution, the Napoleonic Wars, the War with France, the American War of 1812, and saw Napoleon meet his final defeat at Waterloo.

But all these events were far away. He was probably more interested in watching the gradual emergence of Scotland from a poverty-stricken nation to one of wealth and prosperity, all within the span of his own life.

As a farmer, and as Factor of the Crathes estate, he was especially interested in the improvement in farming methods — the large farms succeeding the small ones, the planting of trees by the thousands on bare hillsides, the draining of lakes and marshes, the longer farm leases giving assurance to tenants of continuity of management, the rotation of crops, the introduction of turnips, clover and Lucerne as fodder crops, enormously increasing the supply of feed for cattle, and eventually leading to better breeds.

He saw the new swing plow, invented by John Small of Dalkeith in 1750, supplant the cumbersome old wooden plow, and the new threshing machine built by Andrew Meikle of Duchar in 1778 supplant the flail, and soon he saw threshing machines driven by horse or water power, and eventually by steam, installed on every up-to-date farm in the land.

He saw the beginning of the gradual change from domestic spinning and primitive weaving on hand looms, to spinning and weaving by machines, first operated by hand and then by water power and finally by steam. As early as 1774 James Watt had made a really effective steam engine for pumping water from mines and soon afterwards made one that could turn the wheels of machines.

And with larger farms and more prosperous farmers he saw a tremendous improvement in housing. No longer was the old sod house considered satisfactory, with a hole for a window and another in the thatched roof for a chimney, and in winter the cows and pigs occupying one end of the single room while the farmer and his family, little superior in cleanliness, occupied the other. A tenant of two or three hundred acres must have a substantial stone house of two or three stories, with tile roof, and this farm house was only one of a group of massive stone buildings that looked down on the rolling corn fields like a medieval fortress.

He saw, too, a modern system of highways and bridges replace the muddy and boulder-strewn tracks that had done duty for roads. Though at this time Scotland could boast of only one or two short lengths of railway over which trains of wagons drawn by horses slowly rumbled, the opening of the Forth and Clyde Canal in 1790 made it possible to transfer heavy goods across central Scotland.

At one time it looked as though the horse-drawn barges would be replaced with speedier vessels. In 1801 (six years before Robert Fulton's Clermont sailed the Hudson) the people of Kirkintilloch were astonished to see a strange monster, breathing smoke and steam, churn its way through the water at the rate of almost six miles an hour and pulling two barges after it. Their wonder was pardonable, for they were looking at the first steamboat, the Charlotte Dundas, which William Symington had designed after years of experiment. But the waves created by this tremendous speed endangered the banks of the canal, and it was not until 1812, when the Comet, built by another Scot, began to ply on the Firth of Clyde that people realized the importance of the new invention.

In the early days of the 19th Century steam engines were introduced not only in most of the new mills and factories, but also, as already noted, on many of the farms. Steam engines required coal, so new shafts were sunk and coal production soared; and, as the new machinery was made of iron and steel it was inevitable that hitherto untouched deposits of iron ore should be opened up, and that engineering works should spring up in the new industrial centers, which soon became the magnets for increased population.

In short, William Burnett was a witness of changes so complete and startling as to deserve the name of an industrial revolution. Says Robert Mackie, in his excellent Short History of Scotland,

"These changes were not confined to Scotland. They originated, if anywhere, in England, and spread in time throughout the whole of Western Europe. But nowhere were the changes more sudden and startling than in Scotland. In no other country did the ordinary workman reach a higher level of efficiency, and even in that age of invention there was no other achievement which could be placed beside that of James Watt.

"For the first time in history Scotland had become a wealthy and busy country."

¹ Webster defines Factor as "a steward or bailiff of an estate."

ROBERT BURNETT, WRITER TO THE SIGNET
THE SIGNET

Chapter 17

My grandfather, Robert Burnett, born 1 Aug., 1788, was ambitious. He was not content to be a farmer like his father, even though his father was a rather eminent farmer, as well as a man of business, as Factor to Sir Robert Burnett of Leys.

Robert's ambition was to be a lawyer, and, after receiving a suitable preliminary education, he was apprenticed first to James Gibson, Esq., and afterwards to William Gardener, Esq., advocates in Aberdeen. Subsequently William Gardener removed to Edinburgh and became a Writer to the Signet, and Robert went with him.

Having completed his apprenticeship he was in due time admitted to the bar and became an advocate of King's Bench, and later a Writer to the Signet himself.

The title Writer to the Signet seems to have been peculiar to Edinburgh, and is defined by the Century Dictionary as follows:

"The signet in Scotland is a seal by which royal warrants connected with the administration of justice were formerly authenticated. Hence the title Writers to the Signet, or Clerks of the Signet, a class of legal practitioners in Edinburgh who formerly had important privileges, which are now nearly abolished."

In this connection it is interesting to note that Sir Walter Scott and also his father were Writers to the Signet.

In August, 1816, at the age of twenty-eight, Robert Burnett married Amelia Shirrefs, daughter of Rev. James Shirrefs, D.D., Senior Minister of Aberdeen, and established his residence at 11 Nelson St., Edinburgh. Here my father was born, and probably most of his other children.

Eleven years later, in 1827, Robert and his family were living at 16 Dublin St., and on the 3rd of March of that year he wrote to his brother William, at 201 Bowery, New York City, as follows:

"I have not been very well for a year, and have sometimes been laid aside altogether, but am now better, and getting into a more healthy state. My family is in good health, and I have reason to be thankful I have not as yet lost any of them. I have three sons and five daughters, and Mrs. Burnett is generally stout, considering her large family. Our three elder children (two girls and a boy) are at school, and are getting on very well; the two next (twins of 5 years old) are not at school yet, but are learning to read at home."

The elder children referred to were apparently Amelia, Ellen and James, and the twins were Jane and Margaret.

Later on he says:

"I am very busy and am to set off for London in a few days, where I shall be occupied for some weeks, and afterwards I propose going to the country, probably North, to endeavor to re-establish my health."

It is evident that he was a successful lawyer. About a year before his marriage he was able to afford a miniature of himself, painted on ivory, possibly as a gift to his bride-to-be. In 1826 he commissioned an artist to paint a life-size portrait of his father, and also had lithographic copies made, probably one for each member of the family. It is known that he sent one to his brother in America. It is from one of these prints, in the estate office at Crathes Castle, that the illustration in this volume was reproduced. Also, he was able to live in substantial houses, in desirable locations, and to provide for a large family. All this indicates a man of means.

But a lawyer's earning power depends upon his personal efforts. The ill health from which he suffered during the later years of his life must have caused serious interference with his work and consequently with his income. This, coupled with family expenses and medical treatments, compelled him to encumber the Friendville property (see Chapter 19), which was in his name, with a loan of £3,000. This he never had an opportunity to repay, as he died only a few months later, on 9 August, 1828. He had just entered upon his forty-first year.

A record of his numerous descendants will be found in Part IV.

When Robert Burnett lived in Edinburgh it had just emerged from its old character of a medieval walled town and was becoming a modern city. Robert Mackie, in his Short History already mentioned, thus describes the situation:

"Down to the closing years of the 18th Century the prosperous merchant or shop-keeper had been content to live above his shop in a flat that contained at most four rooms. One might admire the carved stone fireplace, the panelled walls, the graceful lines of the new mahogany furniture; still one had to admit that a house lighted at night by one or two flickering candles, a house without water pipes or drains, left much to be desired.

"Household refuse had to be thrown from the window after dark, woe betide the benighted wayfarer who did not have presence of mind to shout 'Haud your hand' when he heard the warning cry 'Gardylloo'¹ from a window above."

Except for sewage and garbage disposal, the tiny windows were seldom opened. The buildings were hemmed in on every side by tall blocks of flats called "lands," which in Edinburgh became veritable sky-scrapers of ten or eleven stories. As was usual in a walled town, additional accommodations for increasing population had been obtained by putting the houses more closely together and building higher within the old boundaries.

The closes, or gardens, which had once brought a country fragrance into the very heart of the town, disappeared altogether in the great bulks of stone and mortar, or survived only as dark passages leading into narrow and sunless courtyards.

It was in a flat in one of these tall "lands," approached by a malodorous common stair, that not only the prosperous merchant, not only ministers, lawyers and doctors, but judges and lords and ladies, were forced to dwell.

Then, in the closing years of the 18th Century, a great change took place. The merchant, the minister, doctor, lawyer, judge and lady of high degree forsook their cramped and lofty quarters in the Old Town and settled in the New Town of broad streets and stately houses that had sprung up on the further side of the Nor' Loch. There were found, in addition to the stately houses, roomy villas set in spacious gardens on the outskirts of the city.

Wall paper took the place of the wood panelling; in 1823 gas was introduced in some of the more up-to-date houses and eventually replaced the dim, uncertain oil lamps for street lighting.

In 1821 steamboats had begun to ply between Leith and London, and this transportation was doubtless used by Robert Burnett on his trip to London in 1827. He did not live long enough to travel very much by railway, for at the time of his death there were only two locomotives in the whole of Scotland.

In his time Edinburgh was the metropolis of Scotland. The Scottish nobleman, the laird whom the new methods of farming had enriched, had his town house, not in London but in Edinburgh.

Today London is the magnet which draws the ambitious Scot who wants to be a great artist, architect or man of letters. But at the beginning of the 19th Century he turned his steps to Edinburgh, where Sir Henry Raeburn, the greatest portrait painter of his time, Sir Walter Scott, whom most people then regarded as the greatest imaginative writer in Europe, and Robert Adam, famous architect and designer of the most stately square in the New Town, made their homes.

Amid such surroundings, and with such contemporaries, Robert Burnett was well content to dwell.

AMELIA SHIRREFS, Wife of Robert Burnett Chapter 18

Amelia Shirrefs was born 14 August, 1797, and spent her girlhood at Friendville, Deeside Road, Aberdeen. This was the name given by her father, Rev. James Shirrefs, D.D., to the small estate where he and his family took up their residence in 1803. For a description of Friendville and a biography of Dr. Shirrefs see Chapters 19 and 28.

Amelia was the fourth of five children, and was brought up in an atmosphere of love and reverence which had a great influence on her character. When the family moved to Friendville their first act was to ask God's blessing upon their new abode. This prayer was transcribed by Dr. Shirrefs and signed by each member of the family. Later, in 1812, when an addition to the house was constructed, its commencement and completion were made the occasion for prayer and thanksgiving. These prayers, yellow with age, are in my possession.

Amelia was well born. Through her mother, Amelia Morison, she was descended from the ancient Morison family, dating back to the 8th Century, and from the family of Dyce of Disblair. Through her father her ancestry included the families of Shirrefs, Lunan, Forbes of Moneymusk, Thain of Blackhall, and the famous Gordon clan.

Curiously enough, she was also descended, through the Lunans, from her husband's family, and could trace her ancestry in a direct line back to Sir Thomas Burnet, 1st Baronet, and through him to the Alexander Burnard who obtained a charter from King Robert the Bruce in 1323.

Accounts of all these families will be found in Part VI, and their detailed genealogies in the Appendix.

Amelia was well educated. At seven years of age she wrote a very good hand, as shown by her signature to the prayer in 1803, and at thirteen she composed excellent poetry. Her father was a highly educated man, and her eldest brother, David, was studying for the ministry and received the degree of Master of Arts from Marischal College when he was seventeen years of age. He died at the age of eighteen, at Madeira, where he had gone in search of health. In a little memorial volume of his life and youthful essays, compiled in solemn pride by his father, and beautifully printed for private distribution, occurs this passage:

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

The history of the United States of America is a story of growth and change. It begins with the first settlers, who came to the New World in search of a better life. They found a land of opportunity, but also a land of challenge. The early years were marked by conflict and struggle, as the settlers fought to establish their own society and defend their rights.

As the years passed, the United States grew in size and power. It became a nation of immigrants, with people from many different backgrounds and cultures coming to live and work in the new land. This diversity was one of the strengths of the United States, as it allowed the country to draw on the talents and skills of many different people.

The United States has always been a nation of pioneers. From the first settlers to the men who went west to find new lands, the United States has always been a land of opportunity. It is a land where anyone can make a better life for themselves, if they are willing to work hard and take risks.

The United States has also been a nation of leaders. It has led the world in many ways, from the invention of the automobile to the development of the atomic bomb. It has been a force for good in the world, fighting to end slavery and for the rights of all people.

The United States is a nation of many faces. It is a land of great diversity, with people from many different backgrounds and cultures. It is a land of opportunity, where anyone can make a better life for themselves. It is a land of leaders, who have shaped the world in many ways.

Amelia Shirrefs, wife of Robert Burnett

"To his brothers and sisters his friendly counsel and assistance were ever ready; were undoubtedly of essential service; and have left impressions which, I hope, will remain with them as long as they live. He often amused his mother and sisters, while they were at work, by some literary information, or philosophical experiment; and, in a plain and easy method, conveyed to them more knowledge of Geography, Natural and Civil History, Chronology, Natural and Moral Philosophy, than ladies generally have access to receive."

Amelia was only nineteen when she married Robert Burnett and went with him to Edinburgh, where she carried the same spirit of love, piety and culture into her own home that she had known in the home of her parents.

We can well imagine that the young couple — he, handsome, manly, energetic and ambitious, and she girlish, beautiful and demure — must have made a pretty picture as they stepped from the quaint old doorway of Friendville on that August day in 1816, and set out on their journey to Edinburgh, followed by the blessings and good wishes of their families and friends. And in those days it was quite a journey, as shown by the following advertisement in the Aberdeen Almanack:

The Royal Mail Coach

Sets off from Mr. Gordon's Royal Mail Coach Office, Dempster's Hotel, Union-street, every day at 20 minutes past 2 o'clock afternoon, and arrives at Edinburgh next day at noon.

The distance is shown as 128 miles, and the fare for inside passengers was £3-3-0, and for outside £1-16-0.

In 1823, Amelia's mother and brothers having passed away, her father made an irrevocable settlement of all his property upon his two daughters — Amelia, wife of Robert Burnett, and Jane, wife of Alexander Cadenhead — upon the stipulation that the two husbands pay him, as rent, the sum of £210 per year during his lifetime.

The settlement provided that his estate, which included other property besides Friendville, should be divided by an advocate into two equal portions, and that the husbands should draw lots for the two portions. The Burnetts drew Friendville and it was conveyed to Robert Burnett in terms of his marriage settlement, although the marriage had actually taken place seven years before.

After the death of her husband in 1828 Amelia returned to Friendville, where she was able to comfort the declining years of her father, who died less than two years later.

And here, amid the scenes of her own youth, she brought up her family, all of whom carried away with them, as they went out into the world, tender memories of the old home where they had spent a happy and serene childhood.

Amelia, the first born, was the first to leave the maternal nest, when she married Rev. Henry Hine in 1839; and during the next year or two the old house saw two more weddings — Jane married Lieut.

(afterwards Maj.-Gen.) James George Balmain, and Margaret, Maj. William Smith Thom.

I have said that the children passed a happy and serene childhood. Unfortunately it was not such a happy time for their mother. The encumbrance which her husband had been compelled to place upon the estate only a few months before his death proved a grievous burden to his widow. It finally resulted in the property being offered for sale to satisfy the debt. It was first advertised in April, 1840, and repeatedly thereafter at prices starting at £4,000 and finally coming down to £2,450. For this sum it was sold to Capt. Malcolm Mackenzie, H. E. I. S. (Honorable East India Service), in June, 1842.

Meantime, James and William had gone to America, and, about 1841, when he was but fifteen years of age, Robert left home and went to sea. After three years of voyaging he too finally landed in America.

Freed from ties to the old home Grandmother followed her sons across the sea. She took Aunt Katie with her, leaving behind for a time Helen and Elizabeth. The former went to live with her married sister Amelia Hine, and the latter went to Inverness to stay with her Uncle Alexander Burnett. She took with her, as a present from Grandmother, the life-size portrait of William Burnett already mentioned, which Robert Burnett had had painted for his own home. This was quite a journey for a young girl to take alone. The Royal Mail Diligence was advertised to set out at seven in the morning and to arrive at Inverness between two and three the next morning! The distance was 99 miles

The portrait referred to descended from Alexander Burnett to his granddaughters, Emily and Jane Hill-Rennie, and upon the death of the latter in 1940 it came into the possession of her grand-nephew, John Hughes Heyman, Esq., of 46-c Harrington Gardens, London S.W.7, England.

In America Grandmother lived in Milford, New Jersey, and Bath Beach and Wilbur, New York, where for a time she taught school. Later she removed to Kingston, and finally, about 1874 to Port Ewen, New York, where her son Robert and his family were established.

Here, in an old-fashioned little house, with an old-fashioned garden, she lived with her daughter, Catherine La Forge, and her granddaughter Amy La Forge, for more than a decade, beloved by all with whom she came in contact.

As the widow of one of their members she was entitled to an annuity from the Society of Writers to the Signet, which was paid regularly until the day of her death. This at first amounted to only £60 per year, but was later increased to £90. During the latter years of her life she frequently chuckled over the fact that she had lived so much longer than they had probably expected.

Even at an advanced age her mind was clear and active, and she possessed a fund of Scottish anecdotes and folk stories, in verse and prose, which she could recite by the hour.

She died of old age on 23 June, 1886, in her eighty-ninth year, and was sincerely mourned by family and friends.

Friendville, the girlhood home of my Grandmother, and also the boyhood home of my father, is a quaint, upstanding house of stone, with steep roof and numerous chimneys. It is surrounded by old-fashioned shrubs and flowers and stands in an estate of thirty acres on Deeside Road in that portion of Aberdeen known as Mannofield. It has stood there at least from 1792, and probably twenty years longer.

My great grandfather, Rev. James Shirrefs D.D. acquired this estate in 1802 and took up his residence there the following year. Some nine years later he built an addition, which must have been quite large, as it was commenced in July, 1812, and not finished until the following May. As already stated, the place eventually came into the possession of my grandmother, who lived there more than a dozen years and finally disposed of it when she came to America.

An interesting insight into the family life at Friendville in my great grandfather's time may be obtained from the prayers already mentioned, and the memorial volume from which I have quoted. This little leather-bound book, with its simple account, in old-time phrasing, of the young life whose ending made the first break in the family circle, is an intimate and pathetic record.

The fly leaves of this little volume in my possession contain poems on the departed brother in the handwriting of Amelia, then thirteen, and of James, three years older.

Friendville has long been a sort of family shrine for the descendants of Robert Burnett and Amelia Shirrefs. Uncle William Burnett visited it in 1873, in company with Cousin Robert Burnett Hine. He found it little changed from the days of his childhood. It was owned by Mrs. Malcolm Mackenzie, widow of the original purchaser from Grandmother Burnett. Residing with her were eight members of her family, including a Mrs. Oswald and daughter. At that time Mrs. Mackenzie offered to sell the place for £7,000 — quite an increase over the £2,450 her husband paid for it.

Uncle William's notebook records the fact that there were four or five acres in strawberries which were sold in the Edinburgh and London markets.

Friendville. From an old photograph.

When I visited Friendville in 1900 it apparently retained all the charm of a century before. It was still in possession of the Mackenzie and Oswald families.

Cousins Emily Burnett and Elizabeth Smethurst visited the old home in 1929, and found it in possession of A. T. Cruickshank, Esq., an advocate of Aberdeen. He received them very courteously and afforded them every opportunity to inspect the place, and to learn all that he knew of its history. Later he went to the trouble of writing two very interesting monographs, one on Friendville and the other on Dr. Shirrefs, compiled from documents of title, old newspaper advertisements, and books of reference. These valuable contributions to our family history have furnished much of the information in this and adjoining chapters. Their assistance is much appreciated and most gratefully acknowledged.

In 1930 Cousin Agnes Vaux made a pilgrimage to Friendville, and found it full of interesting associations.

According to Mr. Cruickshank's researches the property was originally owned by the family of Skene of Rubislaw, who granted it, with other lands, to Robert Balmanno, a merchant of Aberdeen, in 1772. In 1790 Robert Balmanno sold the estate to Dr. Arthur Dingwall Fordyce of Culsh, Commissary of Aberdeen, and one of the most famous men connected with the city during the past three centuries.

Dr. Fordyce was possibly the largest owner of land in Aberdeen, and it is probable that he bought the property merely as an investment, and that the house was not built by him but by Robert Balmanno, perhaps soon after 1772. In 1792 Dr. Fordyce advertised the property for sale, but it was not until 1802, as already stated, that he sold the property to Dr. James Shirrefs and wife.

The estate was originally forty acres, of which thirty were acquired by Dr. Shirrefs. The other ten acres were acquired later by his brother, Alexander Shirrefs, advocate in Aberdeen.

The origin of the name Friendville is uncertain, but it is believed to have been derived from "Friendship Farm," a property in the same general vicinity.

Friendville has once more changed hands. Mr. Cruickshank writes me that a few years ago he sold it to Mr. John Bell, a dealer in antiques in Aberdeen — partly as a residence and partly as a place to display antique furniture. He reports that it was not damaged during the German air raids, neither was Marischal College nor the buildings of the Seven Incorporated Trades, one of which contains Dr. Shirrefs' portrait. Bombs, however, fell near the Colleges, and shattered many windows.

JAMES GILBERT BURNETT,

The Author's Father

Chapter 20

James Gilbert Burnett was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, 6 November, 1819, and died in St. Louis, Missouri, 19 March, 1870. He was the eldest son of Robert Burnett and Amelia Shirrefs, whose biographies will be found in Chapters 17 and 18. He was a brother of Elizabeth Graham Burnett (No. 20 in Chapter 23), who married Warren Chipp.

An early marriage having proved unhappy, he married, 7 June, 1865, Julia Maria Chipp, niece and adopted daughter of Warren Chipp. Her biography will be found in these pages (Chapter 28).

My father's father died when he was less than nine years old, and his mother then returned, with her family, to her girlhood home of Friendville, Aberdeen. His boyhood there was a happy one, of which he retained fond memories to the day of his death.

In his early twenties he emigrated to America, where his father's brother, Rev. William Burnett, was established as a publisher in New York.

He was an actor, manager and producer, of ability and reputation, in the old days of stock companies. He was leading man for the great tragedian Edwin Forrest, and played principal roles with other notable stars of that day. He was a friend and contemporary of Joseph Jefferson, Edwin Booth, E. A. Sothern, C. W. Coudock, William J. Florence, John T. Raymond and many other famous players long since passed away.

He was lessee of the Crosby Opera House, Chicago, and later of the Varieties Theatre, St. Louis. He was also proprietor of a dramatic agency.

He was stage manager of Laura Keane's Theatre, New York, during the memorable panic of 1857, when banks and business houses were going by the board on every hand and the theatres were particularly hard hit.

At this juncture he and Joseph Jefferson, another member of the company, collaborated in the writing of a stirring melodrama based on the Revolutionary story of Blanche of Brandywine. This was a startling innovation in a legitimate Broadway theatre, but it saved Miss Keane from bankruptcy.

The second act of the play ended with the Battle of Bunker Hill, which was given as a tableau reproducing upon the stage Trumbull's famous painting, "The Death of Warren." The stage was transformed into a grassy mound and the characters were to be placed upon it exactly as they appeared in the painting. This sounded simple enough, but it was found very difficult to correctly place so many people and to have the first ones maintain their trying poses while all the others were being arranged.

After personally attempting to stage the scene Miss Keene declared that it could not be done, and Jefferson was inclined to agree. In his Autobiography he tells how my father came to the rescue with a simple suggestion which solved the problem at once:

"Burnett's idea was that the characters in the engraving should be cast just as they would be in a play. Thus each figure in the picture was marked with the name of the actor who was to represent it. The engraving was then hung up in the green room where each one could look at it and study the attitude he was to take. This was caught up at once. Their names were then marked upon the mound in chalk, and when the word was given to strike the tableau each one took the position, assumed his attitude, and the picture was complete."

A year or so later he assisted in the production of the famous play Our American Cousin, in which he cast Jefferson and Sothern for the parts in which they made their first hits.

Sothern bitterly resented the role of Lord Dundreary, and quarreled with my father over it, but after he found that it was the turning point in his career he publicly acknowledged that my father's judgment was better than his own, and they shook hands across the table at a banquet celebrating the success of the play.

This play ran for many years, and was being presented in Washington in 1865 at the theatre in which President Lincoln was assassinated. My father was in New York at the time, and was doubtless thrilled by young James G. Garfield's short but dramatic address, ending with the famous sentence, "God reigns, and the government at Washington still lives."

Our American Cousin was used as a starring vehicle successfully by Laura Keene, Jefferson and Sothern. Many years later Sothern's son, Edward H. Sothern, revived it for a new generation of theatre-goers, and scored a hit in his father's old role.

My father was a man of charming personality and was popular with all who knew him. More than a quarter of a century after his death, William Winter, dean of American dramatic critics, referred to him as "that winning gentleman and versatile and accomplished actor," and Joseph Jefferson, in his Autobiography, after describing the Bunker Hill episode, said:

"Before concluding this incident I desire to pay my respects to Mr. James G. Burnett, as he was intimately connected with Laura Keene's Theatre both as actor and stage manager.

"Our friendship existed over a period of many years, and I cannot recall to mind one act of his that was not characterized by honesty and truth . . . He acted Sir Anthony Absolute and Lord Duberly in St. Louis, and rendered them both with fine effect."

80-81

JAMES GILBERT BURNETT,

The Author's Brother

Chapter 21

James Gilbert Burnett was the son of James Gilbert Burnett and Julia Maria Chipp. He was born 5 August, 1868, and died 20 April, 1894.

He was a lawyer and poet. He practised his profession in New York City, and was a contributor to Harper's Magazine, Scribner's, Century, Atlantic, Life, Puck, Judge, Truth and other periodicals. A collection of his poems, entitled Love and Laughter, Being a Legacy of Rhyme, with an introduction by William Winter, was published by G. P. Putnam's Sons after his death.

In his introduction Mr. Winter said of him:

"He was successful as a lawyer almost from the earliest step — clear in his perceptions, logical in his reasoning, expeditious, direct, impressive and sincere — but he soon wore out his strength in the labor he loved, and he then was compelled to travel in the quest of health.

"The vein in which he chiefly loved to write was that of humorous playfulness touched with sentiment, — a vein of which, in English literature, the most brilliant representatives are Thomas Hood and Winthrop Mackworth Praed . . .

"He was in personality honorable, chivalrous, buoyant, gleeful, affectionate and gentle; he lived with simplicity and died with composure; and his book, — in which every trait is gentle and every thought is pure, and of which the style is happy with vivacious feeling and verbal grace, — will commend itself to good hearts wherever it may come."

Love and Laughter received high praise from the press, from Boston to San Francisco. A few extracts from the many favorable notices are appended:

"He was only twenty-five years old, a hard-working lawyer, writing only casually and 'because he must,' yet every weekly and monthly welcomed whatever he had to offer. It is not until one goes over the hundred or more youthful poems, each a gem in its way, that the full force of his natural genius becomes apparent."

"He was a gentle scholar, with a chivalric soul, writing often with a light hand, but now and then exhibiting a thoughtfulness that was remarkable. Just before the end came he dictated these exquisite lines:

'Death has no terrors, fears nor pains
From Life to bar my way;
I go as from Siberian plains
To gardens of Cathay.' "

— New York Herald.

"This sensitive and accomplished observer looked good-humoredly on the amusing phases of social life; he had youth in his veins and he put it into his work. The volume abounds in sunshine, and so tactfully did Mr. Burnett poise his measures that they flow in tuneful order from the first page to the last."

— New York Tribune.

"His must have been a sunny nature, that saw the world under shining skies. If death was just before him, all the shadows were cast the other way. Everywhere the fancy is free as a singing bird."

GENEALOGICAL OUTLINE OF THE MAIN BRANCHES OF THE WILLIAM BURNETT BRANCH Chapter 22

The main branches of the William Burnett Branch stem from his five children. These children are shown in the paragraphs below headed by large Roman numerals; also their children, who are the heads of what may be called sub-branches.

This Genealogical Outline is designed to supplement and explain the complete genealogical data in the next chapter, which is arranged by generations and not by branches.

For example, the First Generation consists of William Burnett; the Second Generation consists of his children; the Third Generation consists of his grandchildren, without regard to branches; and the Fourth shows all his great grandchildren without regard to branches, and so on.

The present chapter affords a general outline of this branch of the family, and the relationship between the various branches and sub-branches.

In some cases a number will be found after the word "issue," thus: "(See 28)." These numbers refer to the main numbers in the following chapter, where the further descents, and further details, will be found.

GENEALOGY OF WILLIAM BURNETT BRANCH

Chapter 23

This chapter contains all available data on the descendants of William Burnett and Helen (Leighton) Burnett throughout the world.

The arrangement is along standard lines, and will be readily understood after a little study of the following:

Arrangement and Numbering

The arrangement is by generations and not by families, as explained in the previous chapter.

Under each generation the names of heads of families are shown in underscored capital letters, preceded by an underscored number. A figure in parenthesis after the Christian name indicates the number of the generation to which the individual belongs. The names in double parenthesis immediately following the name of a head of family indicate the Burnett line of descent, and the figures indicate the number of generations removed from William Burnett of the first generation.

The maiden names of married women are shown in parenthesis. Where no surname is shown, the surname is Burnett.

Example

In the Third Generation, "8. ANNA AMELIA (3) (BURNETT) STORER. ((dau. Rev. William (2), William (1).))," indicates that Anna Amelia Burnett, of the third generation, married a Storer, and is the eighth member of the family carried forward from a preceding generation. It also indicates that she is the daughter of Rev. William Burnett of the second generation, and the granddaughter of William Burnett of the first generation. Glancing at her children it will be noted that each of the names is preceded by a small Roman numeral, indicating the order of birth, and that to the left of some of these Roman numerals are larger Arabic numbers. These latter numbers refer forward to the next generation, where the same number will be found preceding the name of the individual designated, followed by the complete family history of that individual.

Where no Arabic number appears opposite the name of a child, it

¹Names and dates of birth per family Bible.

²Date of birth uncertain. Wilhelmina May Shinabarger (daughter) gave 18 October, 1828, but this conflicts with letter of Robert Burnett in my possession, dated 3 Mch., 1827, stating "I have three sons and five daughters . . . Our three eldest children (two girls and a boy) are at school; the two youngest (twins at five years old) are learning to read at home." Ellen must have been one of the three eldest, as dates of birth of all the younger children are fixed by gravestones. If Ellen had been born in Oct., 1828, it would have conflicted with birth of Catherine, whose date of birth was 18 May, 1828, fixed by her gravestone. Have therefore assumed that Ellen was the second dau., as given in my original chart, prepared more than fifty years ago, with the aid of members of the family now passed away. Unfortunately I have been unable to obtain any official record of the birth.

Hsbd.: Expert in reinforced concrete construction; employed by United States Government on important projects. Later specialized in sanitation; originated and patented portable concrete septic tank. Rec-

Let H be a Hilbert space. For any subset S of H , the orthogonal complement of S is defined to be the set of all vectors in H which are orthogonal to every vector in S . We denote this set by S^\perp . It is easy to see that S^\perp is a closed subspace of H . If S is a closed subspace of H , then S^\perp is also a closed subspace of H . In fact, if $\{x_n\}$ is a sequence in S^\perp which converges to x in H , then x is also in S^\perp . This is because for any y in S , $\langle x_n, y \rangle = 0$ for all n , and hence $\langle x, y \rangle = \lim_{n \rightarrow \infty} \langle x_n, y \rangle = 0$. Thus x is orthogonal to every y in S , and so x is in S^\perp .

Now let S be any subset of H . We define the closure of S , denoted by \bar{S} , to be the smallest closed subspace of H which contains S . It is easy to see that \bar{S} is a closed subspace of H . We now define the orthogonal complement of \bar{S} to be \bar{S}^\perp . It is clear that $S^\perp \subseteq \bar{S}^\perp$. In fact, if x is in S^\perp , then x is orthogonal to every vector in S , and hence to every vector in \bar{S} . Thus x is in \bar{S}^\perp .

Conversely, let x be in \bar{S}^\perp . We want to show that x is in S^\perp . Let y be any vector in S . Since \bar{S} is the closure of S , there is a sequence $\{y_n\}$ in S which converges to y in H . Since x is in \bar{S}^\perp , $\langle x, y_n \rangle = 0$ for all n . Hence $\langle x, y \rangle = \lim_{n \rightarrow \infty} \langle x, y_n \rangle = 0$. Thus x is orthogonal to every y in S , and so x is in S^\perp .

Thus we have shown that $S^\perp = \bar{S}^\perp$. This is a useful result, because it tells us that the orthogonal complement of a set is the same as the orthogonal complement of its closure. This is particularly useful when dealing with closed subspaces, since in this case $\bar{S} = S$ and so $S^\perp = \bar{S}^\perp$.

Another important result is the following: Let S be a closed subspace of H . Then H is the direct sum of S and S^\perp . In other words, every vector x in H can be written uniquely as the sum of a vector in S and a vector in S^\perp . This is a fundamental result in Hilbert space theory, and it has many important applications.

ognized authority; equipped numerous industrial villages. Founder of Stroudsburg Septic Tank Co., of which he was President and General Manager.

Possessed fine bass voice and was soloist in leading choirs and concerts throughout the United States.

Descendant of ancient Italian family which had settled in England prior to middle of 12th Century and subsequently removed to Holland. A member of this family, Klaes Kuyper Janszen Romeyn, came to New Netherlands 1654 and was the progenitor of the eminent Romeyn family in America.

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

The history of the United States is a story of growth and change. From the first settlers to the present day, the nation has evolved through various stages of development. The early years were marked by exploration and settlement, followed by a period of rapid expansion and industrialization. The American Revolution and the Civil War were pivotal moments in the nation's history, shaping its identity and values. The 20th century brought significant social and political changes, including the rise of the American Dream and the challenges of the Cold War.

The American Revolution was a turning point in the nation's history. It was a struggle for independence from British rule, fought between 1775 and 1783. The revolution was led by men like George Washington and Thomas Jefferson, who fought for the principles of liberty and democracy. The Civil War, fought between 1861 and 1865, was a conflict over the issue of slavery. It was a war that tested the nation's unity and its commitment to the principles of freedom and equality.

The 20th century was a time of great change and challenge for the United States. It was a period of rapid technological advancement, including the invention of the airplane and the atomic bomb. It was also a time of social and political upheaval, with the rise of the American Dream and the challenges of the Cold War. The American Revolution and the Civil War were pivotal moments in the nation's history, shaping its identity and values.

The first part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the general principles of the theory of the structure of the atom. It is shown that the structure of the atom is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, and that the laws of quantum mechanics are determined by the laws of the special theory of relativity. The second part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the structure of the atom in the case of a central potential. It is shown that the structure of the atom is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, and that the laws of quantum mechanics are determined by the laws of the special theory of relativity.

The third part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the structure of the atom in the case of a non-central potential. It is shown that the structure of the atom is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, and that the laws of quantum mechanics are determined by the laws of the special theory of relativity. The fourth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the structure of the atom in the case of a non-central potential. It is shown that the structure of the atom is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, and that the laws of quantum mechanics are determined by the laws of the special theory of relativity.

The fifth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the structure of the atom in the case of a non-central potential. It is shown that the structure of the atom is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, and that the laws of quantum mechanics are determined by the laws of the special theory of relativity. The sixth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the structure of the atom in the case of a non-central potential. It is shown that the structure of the atom is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, and that the laws of quantum mechanics are determined by the laws of the special theory of relativity.

The seventh part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the structure of the atom in the case of a non-central potential. It is shown that the structure of the atom is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, and that the laws of quantum mechanics are determined by the laws of the special theory of relativity.

¹According to the rather complex system of Spanish names, a child takes the surname of both father and mother, connected by the conjunction "y", meaning "and." A wife takes only the paternal surname of her husband, usually preceded by "de," meaning "of." However, when an American woman marries a Spaniard, and resides in the United States, it is optional whether or not the Spanish system shall be used. In this case Gladys Leighton Lindsay, instead of using the surname "de Noriega," after her marriage, elected instead to use the name "Sanchez."

TO THE EDITOR:
I am writing to you to inform you of the results of my research on the properties of the new material I have discovered. The material has been found to have a unique set of properties that make it a promising candidate for a variety of applications. I am currently working on a paper describing these results and will be submitting it to a journal in the near future. I would be pleased to discuss these results with you further.

Sincerely,
[Signature]

Enclosed for you are two copies of the paper I mentioned in my letter. I hope you find them interesting and useful. Please let me know if you have any questions or if you would like to see the original manuscript.

Very truly yours,
[Signature]

I am sure that your interest in this work will be well served by the enclosed. I am looking forward to hearing from you again.

With best regards,

VIRGINIA DESCENDANTS

OF BISHOP GILBERT BURNET

Chapter 24

William Burnet, Colonial Governor of New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts and New Hampshire, whose biography will be found in Chapter 15, was the eldest son of Bishop Gilbert Burnet, whose life is fully covered in Chapter 10.

It will be remembered that Governor Burnet was twice married, his second wife being Anna Maria, daughter of Abraham Van Horne and Maria (Provost) Van Horne of New York. By her he had two sons, both of whom died unmarried, and a daughter Mary, who married, and left numerous descendants, mostly in Virginia, who are undoubtedly the only authentic descendants of the famous Bishop, at least in America.

Her descendants, as furnished by Gilbert Burnet Lewis and Herbert A. Claiborne III of Richmond, Virginia, are shown below. (For explanation of abbreviations see beginning of Chapter 23.)

BROWNE

MARY BURNET, born May, 1723, died 22 August, 1745, married 1 November, 1737 (aged 14½) William Browne of Salem, Massachusetts, son of Samuel Browne of Salem and Abigail (Keech) Browne of Bristol, England, and Salem, Massachusetts, a member of a distinguished New England family, and had four sons and two daughters, only one of whom (a son) married and had issue, viz:

I. WILLIAM BURNET BROWNE, b. 7 Oct., 1738, at Salem, Massachusetts, d. 6 May, 1784, and is buried at his home, "Elsing Green," King William County, Virginia; m., 6 May, 1764, Judith Walker Carter, of "Cleve," King George County, Virginia, dau. Charles Carter and Mary (Walker) Carter, and had issue:

1. Betty Carter Browne. m., 12 Sept., 1786, John Bassett, s. Burwell Bassett and Anna Maria (Dandridge) Bassett.
2. Judith Walker Browne. d. 11 Nov., 1830; m. Robert Lewis, s. Fielding Lewis and Betty (Washington) Lewis.
3. Mary Burnet Browne. b. 7 Aug., 1765, d. 6 Jan., 1805; m., 17 Feb., 1781, Herbert Claiborne, s. Augustine Claiborne and Mary (Herbert) Claiborne, and had issue as below.

CLAIBORNE

HERBERT CLAIBORNE and Mary Burnet (Browne) Claiborne had issue:

1. William Burnet Claiborne (name changed to Browne - see Note).

 - ii. Martha Louisa Browne; m. Tabb Yelverton Catlett.
 - iii. Lucius Carter Browne; m. Clara V. Mattingby.
 - iv. William Browne. No other record.
 - v. Thomas Booth Browne. No other record.
 - vi. Jefferson Browne. No other record.
 - vii. Marcellus A. Browne. No other record.
 - viii. Herbert Claiborne Browne. No other record.
 - ix. Betty Carter Browne. No other record.

Note.- William Burnet Browne and Judith Walker Carter having no grandson, an agreement was made that if the eldest son of their daughter, Mary Burnet Browne, and Herbert Augustine Claiborne would change his name from William Burnet Claiborne to William Burnet Browne, he, the latter, would inherit the old home called "Elsing Green" in King William County, Virginia. This change was made legal by Act of Virginia Legislature January 18, 1804. (Henning's Statutes 1804, Chapter 75.)

Unfortunately the new owner of the old home place sold it in 1820 to William Gregory. It is a beautiful Colonial home of brick, still in use.

2. Judith Browne Claiborne. b. at New Kent Courthouse, Virginia, 7 Mch.; 1789, d. at "Springfield," King William County, Virginia, 30 Sept., 1833; m., 27 June, 1807, Capt. William Hill, s. James Hill and Mildred (Clopton) Hill, and had issue. (See Hill.)
3. Harriet Herbert Claiborne. b. at "Elsing Green," King William County, Virginia, 16 Jan., 1793, d. 14 June, 1868; m. Robert Hill, s. James Hill and Mildred (Clopton) Hill, and had issue. (See Hill.)
4. Herbert Augustine Claiborne I (b. Mch. 5, 1784, at "Chestnut Grove," New Kent County, Virginia, d. 5 Aug., 1841, in Richmond, Virginia) was the second s. of Herbert Claiborne (1746-1814) and his wife Mary Burnet Browne (1765-1805), dau. William Burnet Browne and Judith Walker Carter, his wife. He married Delia Hayes (1794-1838), dau. James Hayes and Ann Dent (Black) Hayes, and had issue:
 - i. Presley Claiborne (1817-1822).
 - ii. Herbert Augustine Claiborne II (1819-1902).

DESCENDANTS OF JOHN BURNETT

Chapter 25

Arrangement and Numbering in This and the Next Chapter

Under each generation the names of heads of families are shown in underscored capital letters, and numbered from "1" up in Arabic figures preceded by the letter "J" in this chapter and by the letter "T" in the succeeding chapter. The names of the children are preceded by small Roman numerals, indicating the order of birth. "J-" numbers and "T-" numbers to the left of some of these Roman numerals refer forward to the next generation, where the same number will be found preceding the name of the individual designated. A figure in parenthesis after the Christian name indicates the number of the generation to which the individual belongs. The names in double parenthesis immediately following the name of a head of family indicate the Burnett ancestry and the figures indicate the generation of each ancestor.

THE TREATMENT OF THE ACUTE INFLUENZA

BY DR. J. H. HAY, CHICAGO, ILL.

Read before the American Medical Association, Chicago, Ill., April 1, 1919.

The influenza epidemic of 1918-1919 has been the most severe in the history of the world. It has been characterized by its rapid spread, its high mortality, and its unusual complications. The disease has been described as a "great influenza" and has been the cause of millions of deaths. The treatment of the disease has been a subject of much controversy, and many different methods have been suggested. The purpose of this paper is to review the treatment of the acute influenza and to suggest a plan of management.

The first of these is the fact that the United States is a young nation, and that its history is a history of growth and development. The second is the fact that the United States is a nation of immigrants, and that its history is a history of the struggle for a common identity. The third is the fact that the United States is a nation of diverse peoples, and that its history is a history of the struggle for equality and justice.

The fourth is the fact that the United States is a nation of ideas, and that its history is a history of the struggle for freedom and democracy. The fifth is the fact that the United States is a nation of action, and that its history is a history of the struggle for progress and improvement.

The sixth is the fact that the United States is a nation of hope, and that its history is a history of the struggle for a better future. The seventh is the fact that the United States is a nation of faith, and that its history is a history of the struggle for a higher purpose.

The eighth is the fact that the United States is a nation of love, and that its history is a history of the struggle for a more perfect union. The ninth is the fact that the United States is a nation of peace, and that its history is a history of the struggle for a more peaceful world.

The tenth is the fact that the United States is a nation of unity, and that its history is a history of the struggle for a more united people.

1. The first step in the process of data collection is the selection of a sample. This is done by choosing a random sample of the population. The sample size is determined by the desired level of precision and the variability of the data.
2. The second step is the collection of data. This is done by asking the sample members to provide information on the variables of interest. The data are then organized into a table.
3. The third step is the analysis of the data. This is done by calculating the mean, standard deviation, and other summary statistics. The results are then presented in a graph or table.
4. The fourth step is the interpretation of the results. This is done by comparing the results to the expected results and drawing conclusions. The conclusions are then presented in a report.
5. The fifth step is the presentation of the results. This is done by writing a report that summarizes the findings. The report is then presented to the appropriate authorities.
6. The sixth step is the evaluation of the results. This is done by comparing the results to the expected results and drawing conclusions. The conclusions are then presented in a report.
7. The seventh step is the presentation of the results. This is done by writing a report that summarizes the findings. The report is then presented to the appropriate authorities.
8. The eighth step is the evaluation of the results. This is done by comparing the results to the expected results and drawing conclusions. The conclusions are then presented in a report.
9. The ninth step is the presentation of the results. This is done by writing a report that summarizes the findings. The report is then presented to the appropriate authorities.
10. The tenth step is the evaluation of the results. This is done by comparing the results to the expected results and drawing conclusions. The conclusions are then presented in a report.

The first part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the theoretical aspects of the problem. It is shown that the problem is equivalent to a problem in the theory of differential equations. The second part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the numerical aspects of the problem.
It is shown that the problem can be solved by the method of finite differences. The third part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the results of the calculations. It is shown that the results are in good agreement with the theoretical predictions. The fourth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the conclusions. It is shown that the problem can be solved by the method of finite differences. The fifth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the results of the calculations. It is shown that the results are in good agreement with the theoretical predictions. The sixth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the conclusions. It is shown that the problem can be solved by the method of finite differences. The seventh part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the results of the calculations. It is shown that the results are in good agreement with the theoretical predictions. The eighth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the conclusions. It is shown that the problem can be solved by the method of finite differences. The ninth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the results of the calculations. It is shown that the results are in good agreement with the theoretical predictions. The tenth part of the paper is

FOREWORD ON SOUTHERN BRANCH

The following record of the Southern branch of the Burnett family has been compiled from much information kindly supplied by the family and connections, supplemented by personal research. Especial thanks are due to Miss Lela M. Burnett of Colorado Springs, Colo., and Mrs. William Day Dickinson of Glasgow, Ky., and many others whose help has proved invaluable in compiling this record.

Thomas Burnet and his immediate descendants spelled the name with only one "t," but gradually various members of the family added another "t" until finally the name was transformed to the modern spelling — Burnett.

This was a matter of individual preference, as in the case of Peter Hardeman Burnett, who tells in his book on "The Recollections of an Old Pioneer," that when he was about nineteen he added another "t," and his brothers all followed his example. His reason for the change was his opinion that the name would be more complete and emphatic when spelled Burnett.

As the records are rather defective in this respect, I have assumed that the change in the family name became general in the fourth generation.

THOMAS BURNET married Margaret Blakeley, and is thought to be the father of the six children who emigrated to Virginia. Everything seems to point to the close relationship of this family to the family of the celebrated Bishop Burnet of Salisbury, England, but as yet this has not been authenticated.

There has been a tradition in the family for many years that this Thomas Burnet was the third son of Bishop Gilbert Burnet of Salisbury, the most illustrious member of the family. Another tradition is that the progenitor of the Virginia family was Gilbert Burnet, second son of the Bishop, which tradition probably arose from the fact that one of the immigrants bore the name Gilbert.

A most thorough and painstaking investigation, over a period of nearly fifty years, with the aid of professional genealogists and searchers, first at the instigation and expense of Mrs. John T. McGill of Nashville, Tenn., and recently by the compiler of the present volume, has failed to disclose any proof of such relationships.

Sir Thomas Burnet, son of the Bishop, may be eliminated at once, because he was unmarried. An account of his life has been published by Dr. George Burnett, LL.D., Lyon of Arms, and most eminent authority on heraldry and genealogy in Scotland, in his authoritative work on "The Family of Burnett of Leys and Collateral Branches," published in 1901 by the New Spalding Club of Aberdeen. Sir Thomas was first employed in the diplomatic service, was Secretary for the King to the Diet at Ratisbon, and afterwards Consul at Lisbon for several years. In 1741 he was made one of the Judges of the Common Pleas, and in 1745 received the honor of Knighthood. He was known as one of the best lawyers and most upright judges on the English bench. He edited his father's work on "The History of My Own Times," and was the author of a memoir of the Bishop appended to that work. He died of "gout in the stomach" at his house in Lincoln's Inn Field, 7 January, 1753. His will of 1748 makes no mention of a wife or children. The only Thomas Burnet mentioned in the will is Lieutenant Thomas Burnet, apparently a son of his brother William, who had a son in the army, reported to have died unmarried. Sir Thomas Burnet was entombed beside his father beneath the altar of the Church of St. James in Clerkenwell.

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

The history of the United States is a story of growth and change. It begins with the first settlers, who came to the Americas in search of a new life. They found a land of opportunity, but also one of challenge. The early years were marked by conflict and struggle, as the settlers fought to establish their communities and defend their rights. Over time, the United States grew from a small colony into a powerful nation. It was a process of constant evolution, shaped by the dreams and aspirations of its people. The story of the United States is a testament to the power of the human spirit and the ability of a nation to overcome adversity and build a better future.

Rev. Gilbert Burnet, second son of the Bishop, was not as prominent as Sir Thomas, but was sufficiently well known that he could not have raised a family in Virginia clandestinely. His record, as given by Dr. George Burnett, was as follows:

"Educated at Merton College, Oxford, in holy orders, chaplain to George I, and rector of East Barnet. Author of treatises on theology; died, unmarried, 1736."

The only other possible clue was that in the preface of the volume on the family of Burnett of Leys appeared a statement that George Burnett, LL.D., from whose notes the book was compiled, had other information. This referred to the fact that there are many families of the same name in America, who claimed descent from Burnetts in the northeast of Scotland, but none of the Burnetts who settled in America came within the scope of Dr. George Burnett's researches.

Thinking there might be some notes on Virginia families in Dr. Burnett's papers, I communicated with the Secretary of the New Spalding Club, publisher of the book referred to, and was informed that Dr. Burnett had died without leaving any papers, and that the same was true of Col. James Allardyce, LL.D., who edited the book in question.

the Virginia Burnetts. According to Rockwell D. Hunt, eminent California historian, he lived in Missouri and Tennessee, and was a merchant, lawyer and politician, having studied law at night. He came to Oregon in 1843, in search of a favorable climate for his wife's health, and in order to make money to cancel debts incurred in the mercantile business in Missouri.

From Oregon he went to California as a gold seeker in 1848, and became the lawyer and agent for John A. Sutter, on whose land gold was discovered.

He moved to San Francisco in 1849, and was a member of the Legislative Assembly during its desperate struggle for recognition. He was elected first Governor of California by a large majority, and inaugurated in December, 1849. He proved to be very conservative and constructive, and was opposed to Negro slavery.

He resigned from the Legislative Assembly in 1851 and resumed the practice of law. Late in 1852 he paid the last dollar on his debt to former partners in Missouri, incurred in 1832, and long since outlawed.

In 1856 he opposed the Vigilance Committee, and in 1857 was appointed Judge of the Supreme Court to fill an unexpired term of nearly two years.

In 1863 he organized the Pacific Bank, and was its President for many years. He was the author of four books, including "Recollections of an Old Pioneer" in 1879.

He left a valuable estate to his three surviving children.

The purpose of this study is to investigate the effects of various factors on the performance of a system. The study is organized as follows: Section 2 describes the system and the factors being investigated. Section 3 presents the experimental design and the results of the experiments. Section 4 discusses the implications of the results and provides conclusions. Section 5 contains references.

2. System Description

The system under investigation is a complex system consisting of several components. The components are interconnected and their performance is affected by various factors. The factors being investigated are the input data, the processing time, and the output data. The system is designed to process input data and produce output data. The performance of the system is measured in terms of the time taken to process the input data and the accuracy of the output data.

The results of the experiments show that the performance of the system is significantly affected by the input data, the processing time, and the output data. The input data has a direct effect on the processing time, which in turn affects the output data. The processing time is also affected by the complexity of the input data. The output data is affected by the accuracy of the processing time. The results of the experiments indicate that the system is designed to process input data and produce output data. The performance of the system is measured in terms of the time taken to process the input data and the accuracy of the output data.

NOTE ON ALLIED FAMILIES

While this volume is primarily concerned with the Burnett Family, it must not be forgotten that the Burnetts have been allied by marriage with many other families of equal importance.

Back in the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries the Family of Burnett of Leys formed alliances — just to mention a few — with the Hamiltons, the Montieths, and the Gordons, while in more modern times the descendants of our own William Burnett have been allied with Morison, Forbes, Gordon, Storer, Chipp, Kip and many others.

We who are proud of our Burnett ancestry should remember that we are equally the descendants of many of these allied families, and in this should find added cause for pride and satisfaction.

Historical Sketches of Some of the More Important Families Allied by Marriage
With the Burnett Family

SHIRREFS

The recorded history of the Shirrefs family commences in the 17th Century, with a William Shirrefs of Balfour, Putachie, Scotland.

Alexander Shirrefs, his grandson, fighting at Sheriffmuir on the Stuart side in 1715, was captured and kept prisoner for four months.

David Shirrefs, son of Alexander, was a wright (or builder) in Aberdeen, a deacon and Convener of the Seven Incorporated Trades, which means that he was the active head of the town guilds. He married Jane Lunan, of distinguished ancestry, and had eleven children, including a son James, who proved to be one of the most eminent members of the family.

Rev. James Shirrefs, D. D., born in 1751, was a graduate of Marischal College, Aberdeen, and Minister of the West Church of St. Nicholas for thirty-six years. For his biography and a description of the church, see Chapter 28.

The brothers of Dr. Shirrefs were also men of distinction. His eldest brother, David, went to Jamaica, where he became a planter and evidently prospered, for on his death he left an "ample and independent fortune" to his nephew and namesake, eldest son of Dr. Shirrefs.

Another brother was Alexander, an advocate in Aberdeen and President of the Society of Advocates.

His youngest brother was Andrew Shirrefs, proprietor of the Caledonian Magazine or Aberdeen Repository, and the author of several poems.

LUNAN

According to George Cadenhead, Esq., in his carefully compiled book on The Cadenhead Family, the history of the family of Montalto, and the change of the name through the Norman-French Mont-haut into Mowat, is well known.

He has assembled the known record of this family from the 13th Century as follows:

In 1242 Richard Montealt was a Justiciary of Scotland, and had a son who was Abbot of Arbroath.

In 1262 to 1266 William and Robert Montealt were Sheriffs of Forfar, and Lawrence Montealt was Rector of Kinnettles.

In 1289 to 1320 William de Montealto was a leading man in Scotland.

In 1382 Ricardus de Lownane et Pitfour was well known to the citizens of Aberdeen. In 1383 he sold his lands of Lownan and Pitfour to Alexander Stewart — a natural son of King Robert II — and in Stewart's charter of confirmation the name of the seller is found to be Richardus Mouet. He was successively chaplain, canon and chancellor of Brechin Cathedral.

In 1435 Dominus Laurentius Lownane had built a new school in Dundee without leave from the Bishop, and was rebuked.

In 1436 a Notary Public, a canon of Dunkeld, subscribed himself Walterus de Lownane.

In 1450 a John Lownane, a proprietor in the Apilgate of Arbroath, is a chaplain of Brechin.

In 1480 a Thomas Lunane is proprietor of Mongallie, and 163 years later there is a William Lunan in the same place.

In 1544 Agnes Lownan is the wife of Thomas Strathauchin, civis civitatus Abredonensis.

In 1544 Frater Duncanus Lownan was one of the Conventus of Deir, and subscribed a feu-charter in favor of William, Lord Forbes, and his spouse.

In 1588 Richard Lunan was laureated in Edinburgh University; and, in 1593, was appointed Minister of Marykirk.

Alexander Lunan was, in 1611, entered a student at King's College, Aberdeen; in 1615 he is capped with honors; in 1618 he is Humanist in the University; in 1626 he is Regent, and is also parson of Monymusk and thereafter of Kintore.

In March, 1632, he married Jean, eldest daughter of Sir William Forbes of Monymusk, and had one son, William Lunan of Dallob, who married Barbara Gordon, daughter of Alexander Gordon of Merdrom, and had a son William, who married Isobel Thain and had a grandson, John, who married Jean Burnett and was the great grandfather of Amelia Shirrefs.

The Genealogies of Jean Forbes, Barbara Gordon, Isobel Thain and Jean Burnett will be found in the Appendix.

FORBES

In the account of the Forbes family in Paul's Scots Peerage, from which a large part of this sketch has been obtained, it is stated that the family dates from 870 and beyond, according to some traditions, but that other writers assign to them a descent from the royal blood of Ireland, a variation of this being a descent from a certain O'Connor or Ochonochor, who is said to have come to Scotland in the days of Malcolm Canmore.

It is most probable that Forbes as a personal name was assumed from the lands of that name in Aberdeenshire. These are said to have been in the possession of the family since the time of King William the Lion, who came to the throne in 1165 and died in 1244.

However, according to Burke's Peerage, Duncan Forbes, the first of the name of historical record, had a grant of the lands of Forbes from King Alexander III about 1271.

About 1306 the name of John Forbes or Forbees occurs in an English roll containing a list of demands made by English and Scotch partisans of Edward I for lands which, being forfeited by Scotsmen, they desired to be divided among themselves. The lands of John Forbes or Forbees were among those coveted.

Sir Christian, or Christin, de Forbes, Knight, is named in a grant to him by King Robert the Bruce of a third part of the lands of Ardache and a third of the lands of Skeith in the barony of Deskford, County Banff, in 1325.

After Sir Christian de Forbes the next on record is

John de Forbes, dominus ejusdem, who appears as a witness to two characters in 1358 and 1359, and had a confirmation of charters from King David II and King Robert II, to lands of Edinbanchory and Craiglogy in 1364 and 1374. In the latter year he was acting as Sheriff of Aberdeen. In 1378 he had a charter from the Bishop of Moray of the lands of Fynrossie on the loch of Spynie. He died in 1387 and was described as a "gude man and wise, mychty, and manly in his tyme." He was succeeded by his son

Sir John de Forbes, Knight. He is mentioned as Lord of Forbes in 1387, and as Knight in a letter from King Robert III in 1391. In 1394 he was appointed Justiciary and Coroner of Aberdeenshire. He died in 1406. He is said to have married Elizabeth, or Margaret, Kennedy of Dunure, by whom he had four sons, including

Sir Alexander, who succeeded him. Sir Alexander Forbes acquired most of the possessions subsequently held by his family, including a new charter to the lands of Edynbanchory and Craiglogy in 1402. He is described as Laird Forbes in 1406, and in 1408 was one of four Scottish chiefs who journeyed to England to tourney with English knights.

In 1411 and 1417 he was granted lands in the barony of Kynedwart and in the lordship of Aboyne. In 1421 he had letters of safe-conduct by Henry V to England, with a large retinue, to appear before that monarch and also to visit James I of Scotland, then in Normandy.

In 1423 he had a charter from the Earl of Mar of the lands of Alford, and in the same year a charter from Murdock, Duke of Albany, Governor of Scotland, of the lands and barony of Forbes, and also from the Earl of Buchan a charter of the lands of Meikle Fintry and others.

In 1423-24 he had letters of safe-conduct by Henry V to the presence of James I of Scotland, then at Durham, no doubt to treat as to the King's ransom and liberation, and from 1425 to 1439 he is recorded as receiving numerous grants of lands in Easter Cluny, in the Earldom of Mar, and elsewhere.

About 1445 he was raised to the peerage, being styled Lord Forbes. He died in 1448. According to Burke the barony of Forbes is first in the Union Roll and as such takes rank before all the lords of Parliament.

Lord Forbes married, before 1423, Elizabeth, only daughter of George Douglas, first Earl of Angus, and granddaughter of King Robert III, and was succeeded by his son,

James, second Lord Forbes, who was one of the Lords of Session appointed to sit at Aberdeen for the administration of justice in 1457, and in 1460 he had a charter of the lands of Tullineath in the barony of Cluny from Alexander, Earl of Huntley. He died before 1462. He married Egidia, daughter of William Keith, first Earl of Marischal, by whom he had four sons, including

Duncan of Consindae, who married Christian Mercer, daughter of the Laird of Ballief, Provost of Perth, and widow of Gilbert Skenie of that ilk, and became ancestor of the Forbes of Consindae, Forbes of Monymusk and other families of the name.

Duncan Forbes, grandson of the foregoing, obtained the priory lands of Monymusk, county Aberdeen, at the Reformation. He died in 1587 and was succeeded by his son,

William Forbes of Monymusk, who married Lady Margaret, daughter of William Douglas, ninth Earl of Angus. He died previous to 1616 and was succeeded by his son,

Sir William Forbes, Baronet, of Monymusk, who, in 1626, was created a Baronet "of the lands, barony and regality of Forbes within the region of Nova Scotia, North America." He died in 1661, and was succeeded by his eldest son, Sir William Forbes, 2nd Baronet, who married Jean, daughter of Sir Thomas Burnett of Leys. From this union descended the Forbes of Pitsligo.

Jean Forbes, eldest daughter of the 1st Baronet, married Rev. Alexander Lunan, pastor of Monymusk, and was the great, great grandmother of Jane Lunan who married David Shirrefs.

Jane Lunan was the mother of James Shirrefs, and grandmother of Amelia Shirrefs Burnett.

The genealogy of Jean Forbes will be found in the Appendix.

GORDON

The Gordons are one of the most illustrious of the historic families of Scotland. They have gained distinction both as statesmen and warriors, and have filled the highest places in church and state.

In the index of Sir James Balfour Paul's Scots Peerage, from which much of this sketch has been compiled, there are many columns of Gordons, including thirty-seven peerage titles. Among these are the Dukes of Gordon (now extinct) and the Earls of Aberdeen, Enzie, Aboyne, Huntley, Norwich and Sutherland.

It was from the Gordon Clan that the famous Gordon Highlanders were originally recruited, and this Clan was so powerful that its chief was known as the "Cock o' the North."

It has been suggested by some authorities that the Gordons were descended from a younger son of the family of Swinton, as the coats-of-arms borne by the two families were the same. If this descent could be established their ancestry could be traced through Ernulf of Swinton and Odard of Vanbrugh, up to Waltheof, the Saxon Earl of Northumberland in 968.

There is also a tradition of a Gordon in the days of Malcolm Canmore, who followed that King when he made his last foray into Northumberland in 1093.

On the other hand, it is believed by other genealogists that the Gordons were originally from Normandy, and that the founder of the Scottish branch of the family came into Scotland in the reign of David I (1124-53), from whom he received a grant of lands of Gordon.

However, the first definite record of Gordon as a surname occurs in Scotland about 1171, when Richard, or Richer, Gordon granted certain lands in his town of Gordon to the Monks of Kelso and to the Church of St. Michaels.

Sir Thomas of Gordon, son of Richard, made grants to the nuns of Coldstream, and received the rank of Knighthood before 1232, and his son, Sir Thomas of Gordon, younger, appeared as Laird of Gordon subsequent to that date.

Alicia of Gordon, daughter and heiress to Sir Thomas the younger, married her cousin, Sir Adam Gordon, who is said to have died on a crusade under King Louis XI of France in 1270.

Sir Adam Gordon, Knight, grandson of Alicia, was one of the first of the family to attain distinction and power. He did homage to Edward I at Elgin, 1296, was Warden of the East Marches in 1300, and envoy to treat for peace, at the instance of France, in the following year. In 1305 he was one of the Scots Commissioners to the English Parliament, also one of the Justiciars of Lothian, and Keeper of the Castle of Inveskip; and in 1308 he received a grant of lands from Edward.

He was at first opposed to Robert Bruce, who was then commencing to gain supremacy in Scotland, but in 1313 he forsook his allegiance to England and joined Bruce, for which he was rewarded by a new charter to the lands which he had previously held under the English crown.

In 1320 he was Ambassador from Scotland to the Papal Court, and succeeded in persuading the Roman Pontiff to address an epistle to the English King recommending peace with Scotland. For this he received a grant from King Robert the Bruce of lands at Strathbogie in the north of Scotland, at about the same time that Alexander Burnard, progenitor of the Burnetts of Leys, received a similar grant from the same monarch.

Sir Adam Gordon, son and successor to the distinguished Sir Adam, was one of the leaders of the army at Halidon in 1333, and his son, John Gordon, received from King David II a confirmation of the grant of lands of Strathbogie made to his grandfather by King Robert I.

This John Gordon was succeeded by his son, Sir John Gordon, a distinguished soldier, who had from Robert II in 1376 a renewed confirmation of the charter of Strathbogie.

He died in 1395 without legal issue, and was succeeded by his brother, Sir Adam Gordon.

But although Sir John Gordon was not legally married, nevertheless he had two sons, famous in the Highlands as "Jock" and "Tam" Gordon, whose mother was Elizabeth Cruickshank, daughter of the Laird of Aswanly. This was not as immoral as it appears, as there was undoubtedly a "Scotch marriage," or "hand-fasting union," the offspring of which were not regarded as illegitimate, although they could not be recognized by church or state.

At any rate, "Jock" and "Tam" proceeded to found numerous branches of the Gordon family, which are just as proud of their lineage as are the Earls of Huntley and Aberdeen.

From "Jock" Gordon, the elder of these sons, descended Barbara Gordon, wife of William Lunan, and ancestress of Amelia Shirrefs.

The genealogy of Barbara Gordon will be found in the Appendix.

MORISON

According to L. A. Morrison's History of the Morison or Morrison Family, published in Boston in 1880, the family is very numerous in Scotland and the name has been a fixed surname there and in the adjacent Island of Lewis for many centuries, probably for a thousand years.

It is an old name in the Counties of Lincoln, Hertfordshire and Lancashire, England, where persons of the name several centuries ago were knighted and received coats of arms.

The family has spread over England, Ireland and America. It appears to be evident that all of the name sprang from the same stock and have a common origin.

The Island of Lewis on the West coast of Scotland is undoubtedly the place where the family originated, though its founder was probably of Norwegian origin.

In regard to the origin of the family, Captain F. W. L. Thomas, R.N., Vice President of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland, quotes from a "Description of the Lewis by John Morisone, Indweller there," written presumably between 1678 and 1688, as follows:

"The first and most ancient inhabitants of this country were three men of three several races, viz., Mores, son of Kennanns, whom the Irish historians call Makurich, whom they make to be son to one of the Kings of Norway, some of whose posteritie remains in the land to this day. All the Morisons in Scotland may challenge their descent from this man."

The chief of the Clan Morison was hereditary judge or brieve of Lewis and continued to hold that office until the beginning of the Seventeenth Century. This was an office of great antiquity and great power, similar to the office of Deemster in the Isle of Man, where on assuming office he swore to administer justice between man and man as evenly as the backbone of the herring lies between the two sides of the fish.

His presence, whether in house or field, on horseback or on foot, constituted a court. He was judge in cases of life and death as well as the most trifling contentions. Wherever he was present the abused party could lay his complaint before him. The plaintiff placed his foot upon that of the defendant and held it there until judgment was rendered. Both in Lewis and in Man the decisions seem to have been accepted without reserve.

Capt. Thomas states that the history of the Western Isles began in 563, with the advent of Saint Columba, and that the Scandinavian occupation commenced in 795 and continued until 1266, when the islands were ceded by treaty to Scotland.

The recorded genealogy of Amelia Morison, mother of Amelia Shirrefs, begins with her grandfather, James Morison, who was born in 1665 and was Provost of Aberdeen in 1731-32.

James Morison of Elsick, fifth son of the above James Morison, was also Provost of Aberdeen, in the critical years 1745-46 and again in 1752-53. It will be remembered that the year 1745 was marked by the Jacobite Rebellion under "Bonnie Prince Charlie." The Provost was loyal to the King, and when Aberdeen was threatened by the Jacobite forces he sent the town's ammunition out to sea so that it would not fall into the hands of the enemy or the local sympathizers. When this became known he saved his life only by escaping over the house-tops.

He was born in 1708 and died in 1786. He married Isobel Dyce, eldest daughter of James Dyce of Disblair, merchant in Aberdeen, and had five sons and eleven daughters.

The tenth daughter was Amelia, wife of Rev. James Shirrefs and mother of Amelia Shirrefs who married Robert Burnett.

The genealogy of Amelia Morison, with alliances, will be found in the Appendix.

BALMARENO

Gen. James George Balmain, husband of Jane Farquhar Burnett, had an ancient and distinguished lineage — the Balmareno branch of the Elphinstone (or Elphingstone) family, the latter dating back to the early part of the 13th Century.

According to Paul's Scots Peerage¹, the Honorable James Elphinstone, third son of Robert, third Lord Elphinstone, was Secretary of State under James VI, and was created Lord Balmerinoch (afterwards spelled Balmareno) in 1603. He prepared a letter to the Pope in the King's name, which the King signed without examining it (so he claimed).

When this letter became known it caused a storm of protest, and, in order to save the King embarrassment, Lord Balmareno was persuaded to take the blame, upon the assurance that he would be subjected to no penalty. In spite of this promise he was tried for treason and condemned to be beheaded and quartered and his title and estates forfeited. Curiously enough, no time was fixed for the execution of the death sentence, and it was never carried out.

John, second Lord Balmareno, was restored to the peerage and to his father's estates, but was a leading opponent of the Government, and was eventually tried by jury for "uttering a document tending to render the King and Government odious." He was convicted by a majority of one, but was subsequently pardoned. He was a man of great ability, and was unanimously elected President of the Scottish Parliament, 1641, and subsequently made a Privy Councillor.

James, fifth Lord Balmareno and fourth Lord Coupar, was reputed to be the best judge in Scotland.

Arthur, sixth Lord Balmareno and fifth Lord Coupar, was born in 1688, and adopted the military profession. He fought for the King at Sheriffmoor in the rebellion of 1715, but afterwards resigned his commission and went over to the Jacobites. After the collapse of this rebellion he escaped to France, but was finally pardoned and returned home after an absence of eighteen years.

On the outbreak of the Rebellion of 1745 he joined the standard of "Bonnie Prince Charlie," and in January, 1746, while the rebel army was besieging Stirling, he succeeded to the titles of Lord Balmareno and Lord Coupar upon the death of his brother.

He surrendered at Culloden and was taken to London and confined in the Tower, with the Earls of Kilmarnock and Cromarty. He was convicted of high treason and beheaded in the Tower in 1746 — one of the last to suffer death upon the famous block.

According to Paul's Scots Peerage he married Margaret, daughter of Capt. Chalmers (or Chambers), but had no issue by her, "and thus the male line of this branch of the Elphinstone family, which had suffered so many vicissitudes of fortune, became extinct. The title and estates were forfeited."

However, Cousin Elizabeth Howse, whose family was quite intimate with the Balmains, has given me a different version. According to her Capt. F. N. Balmain, H. C. T. (Honorable East Indian Company's Troops), the father of Gen. Balmain, was a son of the unfortunate Balmareno, but took the name of Balmain during the family's banishment, and eventually came into the title. I have not been able to confirm this from any historical sources available to me.

She told me that Capt. Balmain bought land in Sydney, Australia, hoping to gain enough money to "support the title." The man who represented him sold the land off in building lots and used the money. Upon exposure this man committed suicide.

That particular suburb of Sydney is still called Balmain, and was visited by Cousin Grace Hine of Johannesburg on a trip to Australia in 1936-37. She reported that the land was very valuable at that time.

STORER

The progenitor of the Storer family in American was Augustine Storer, who came to this country in 1629. He was a son of Rev. Thomas Storer, Vicar of Bilbsby, Lincolnshire, England.

William Storer of Dover, Maine, was a son of Augustine, and is supposed to have come to America with him.

Lieut. Joseph Storer of Wells, Maine (1648-1730), was a son of William, and one of the most distinguished members of the family. According to The Storer and Ayrault Families, by Malcolm Storer, Boston, 1927, Joseph Storer fought as an Ensign in the Indian War of 1675 (King Phillip's War), and in 1679 he built a house in Wells, with palisades and fortifications, which was known far and wide as "Storer's Strong House," and proved to be of vital importance to the whole Province of Massachusetts, of which Maine was then a part.

Ordinarily it could accommodate twenty-five persons, but in times of stress several hundred could find refuge within the palisades, within which also a number of cattle could be driven. Eventually there were six such forts at Wells, though none as strong as "Storer's."

In construction it was typical of early forts. It was of two stories, the upper projecting over the lower so that defenders could pour boiling water upon the heads of any attackers who might reach the walls of the building. The lower story had loopholes but no windows, and the oak door was stout enough to resist fire or hatchets. Flankers or watch towers at the corners commanded all sides of the building, and these in turn were well provided with loopholes. Inside the stockade were a number of cabins to accommodate families near enough to the fort to seek refuge at the first warning of a raid.

In the years succeeding 1685 there was ample warning that further trouble with the Indians was inevitable. Three times all the garrisons to the eastward had to be abandoned, and Wells was practically the easternmost frontier post. At the outbreak of hostilities in 1689 (de Castine's War), the whole colony depended upon Wells for its safety, and Joseph Storer's Strong House was the keystone to the safety of Wells.

Bourne's History of Wells and Kennebunk, published in 1875, says of him:

"Storer was active for the defense of the Province, encouraging the people to maintain their ground, giving up to some of the inhabitants tillage land near the fort for cultivation as well as pasture for their cattle

"Perhaps it may be said that to him more than to any other man was the Province indebted for its preservation from entire destruction."

These troubles continued for several years, culminating in a massacre at Wells in 1703. At this time Joseph Storer's daughter Mary, a comely girl of eighteen, with her friend Esther Wheelwright and a girl named Parsons, were carried off by the Indians and taken to Canada. On the march, when provisions ran low, the Indians proposed to roast the Parsons girl for dinner, but happily, in exchange for a gun, they obtained less gruesome food from a wandering party of Mohawks.

After some months of captivity the girls were ransomed by the indefatigable Jesuit priest, Pere Bigot. There is a tradition in the family that he placed them in the Ursuline Convent in Quebec and that Esther Wheelwright subsequently became Mother Superior, and a power in Canada.

In 1708 Mary Storer was baptized into the Roman Catholic faith and in the same year married Jean Gaultier (dit St. Germaine, Gentil-homme), and bore him ten children. The young couple soon dropped the name Gaultier and became known as St. Germain.

Col. John Storer of Wells (1694-1768), son of Lieut. Joseph Storer, was a distinguished soldier, a man of education and of note in the community. According to Malcolm Storer's book already mentioned, he was an extensive land-owner and a prosperous builder and owner of ships and mills. In 1742 he was Town Treasurer and in his later years was Judge of the Inferior Court, a representative of the General Court, and stood at the head of the local aristocracy.

His military service was notable, and centered around the expedition against the French stronghold of Louisburgh in 1745. Ordered by Sir William Pepperell to enlist a company at Wells, his reputation and personal popularity were such that he got all the men he wanted in a single day, practically all from Wells and ranging in age from 16 to 61.

According to Bourne's History of Wells and Kennebunk, in the siege of Louisburgh, which lasted for fifty days and finally broke the power of the French in Canada, Col. Storer was Pepperell's right-hand man, and was indefatigable.

Capt. John Storer of Wells (1727-1764), son of Col. John Storer, was a shipbuilder and merchant and a highly educated man, with degrees of Bachelor of Arts and Master of Arts from Harvard in 1745. His wife was Mary Langdon, sister of the Governor of New Hampshire. He had four sons, including a son Ebenezer, an officer in the Continental Army.

According to the Christian Mirror of Gorham, Maine, in an obituary published in 1846, Ebenezer Storer of Wells (1758-1846) left home in April, 1776, when only seventeen, to enlist in the Continental Army, with a small bundle of clothes in his hand and no funds except a pittance in money (about twenty cents) and a silver spoon, which had been given to him on account of his name. He made his way on foot to the headquarters of the army at Cambridge, a distance of more than eighty miles, and offered himself as a volunteer. Having a fair education he obtained the post of a Quartermaster Sergeant, and soon rose to the rank of Ensign and then Lieutenant. Subsequently he became a staff officer, with rank of First Lieutenant, and assigned to the duties of Paymaster and Clothier, in which capacity he served to the end of the war, under Gen. Washington, for whom he had the highest veneration.

He was present at the surrender of Burgoyne and at the execution of Andre. He was at the Battle of Monmouth and suffered in winter quarters at Valley Forge. For a long time he was stationed at West Point and at Newburgh, and was at Newburgh when peace was proclaimed. He performed his exacting duties with entire satisfaction to his commanding officers, and at the close of the war became a member of the Society of the Cincinnati.

After the war he was an active merchant in Portland, Maine, and afterwards in New York City. He finally retired to Gorham, Maine, where he died in his eighty-eighth year.

He was twice married and had a large family, including a son Ebenezer, a physician in New York City, who had a son Edward, who married Anna Amelia Burnett.

A detailed genealogy of Edward Storer will be found in the Appendix.

CARWARDINE

The family of Carwardine, from which Evelyn Budge Carwardine, wife of William Warder Hine, is descended, is ancient and important.

It is supposed to have been of Norman origin and to have come to England with William the Conqueror. The Carwardine progenitor was knighted on the field of battle — believed to have been the Battle of Agincourt, 1415 — and there awarded by Henry V a coat-of-arms, described in Berry's Pedigrees of Essex Families, page 114, as follows (with free translation):

Arms — Sable, a long bow bent in Bend proper between two Pheons argent. (On a black shield, a long bow, bent, in natural colors, on a broad band, between two silver darts.)

Crest — A wolf passant holding in the mouth an arrow with point embrued, all proper. (A wolf walking past, holding in the mouth an arrow dropping blood, all in natural colors.)

Motto. — On in the right.

According to the Harleian Society Publications, Vol. 14, p. 667, Sir Thomas Carwardine was Master of the Revels to King Henry VIII, and, at a later date, according to tradition, the family was distantly connected with Oliver Cromwell.

In the latter part of the 18th Century, Penelope Carwardine — afterwards Mrs. Butler — sister of Rev. Thomas Carwardine, Vicar of Earl's Colne, was a miniature painter and a close friend of Joshua Reynolds, according to the Dictionary of National Biography, vol. iii, p. 1148 (New York & London, 1908). Sir Joshua painted a portrait of one of her sisters as a present for her, and she herself was painted by Romney and other famous artists. Evelyn Carwardine's great grandmother was painted by Romney under the title of "Mother and Child."

The Carwardine estate in Essex, which remained in the family until after the death of Evelyn Carwardine's grandfather, was known as "The Priory," and was doubtless a part of the ancient religious house of that name founded by Aubrey de Vere I, grandfather of the first Earl of Oxford, probably before 1090, and confirmed by the King before August 1111. Aubrey died, 1112, at Colne Priory, and is buried in the church there. (Complete Peerage, by G. E. C., vol. x, p. 193.) In the same place are interred the remains or effigies of the succeeding Earls.

CHIPP AND ALLIANCES

According to The Chipp Family in England and America, by the present author, the Chipp family goes back to the Norman Conquest, and was intimately associated with some of the most colorful periods of English and American history.

Through its matrimonial alliances it is connected with many of the oldest families in America. These date from medieval times in Holland, Belgium, France, Germany, Norway, England, Ireland and Scotland. Some were of noble birth.

The name was originally de Chepe. Gradually it was changed to Chepe, then Chippe, and finally Chipp. These names occur in the official records of England from the 13th to the 18th Centuries.

In the 14th Century John Chepe was chaplain to Edward III, and John Chippe was deputy Steward of the royal household of Queen Philippa. Later John and Roger Chippe were appointed by Edward III Ushers of the King's Wardrobe for life, and were subsequently reappointed for life by Edward's successor, Richard II.

An Usher of the Wardrobe was a much more important officer in the Middle Ages than would now appear from the title. The King's Wardrobe was a third great department of state, touching every branch of administration and finance.

John Chipp, the founder of the family in America, was born in London, 29 January, 1721, and emigrated to America, with his son Joseph, in 1764. It has not been possible definitely to connect this John Chipp with those of medieval times, but in view of a well established family tradition, the fact that he was descended from some of them would not seem to admit of a reasonable doubt.

When John and Joseph Chipp arrived in America they found the colonies seething with discontent, which finally led to the War of the American Revolution. Both father and son immediately joined the militia and served throughout the war.

Joseph Chipp married Elizabeth Kip, of an old Dutch family, and became one of the leading citizens of Kingston, New York. He was President of the Village for five years, and also a member of the Board of Trustees and Freeholders for the same length of time. His son John subsequently held the latter office. He had five children, all of whom, except one, founded branches of the family.

Chipp Alliances

Joseph Chipp's marriage to Elizabeth Kip allied the family not only to Kip but also to Swartwout, Bradt, Van Etten and Roosa.

Similarly the marriage of John Chipp, eldest son of Joseph, to

Chipp

Hannah Van Steenbergh, brought into alliance two other prominent families — Van Steenbergh and Schoonmaker — while the marriage of Charles Winans Chipp, eldest son of John, to Eleanora Deyo, allied my mother's branch of the family with the ancient and noble French families of Deyo and Du Bois.

A full account of the Chipp family and its alliances will be found in my history of The Chipp Family in England and America, with Genealogical Tree. This work is familiar to most of the Burnett family who also have Chipp ancestry; therefore the information need not be included here.

A genealogy of Warren Chipp will be found in the Appendix; also genealogies of most of the allied families above mentioned.

REV. JAMES SHIRREFS, D. D.

Rev. James Shirrefs, D.D., Senior Minister of Aberdeen, was one of the most eminent men of that city.

He was born in 1751, and at the age of fifteen entered Marischal College, Aberdeen, as a Philosophy and Divinity student. He was appointed by Sir Thomas Burnett of Leys, Sixth Baronet, to a Bursary (or scholarship) established by Gilbert Burnet, Lord Bishop of Sarum, afterwards known as Bishop of Salisbury.

He was graduated in 1770 and became one of the Masters in the Grammar School while preparing for the ministry. He was licensed to the ministry in 1776 and became Chaplain to the Royal Aberdeen Volunteers, and, on 11 September, 1778, being then twenty-seven years of age, he was appointed Minister of the West Church of Aberdeen, St. Nicholas Parish, where he preached for thirty-six years. This appointment was made by a formal "Presentation," signed by the Magistrates and Town Council of Aberdeen. This elaborate document, which is in my possession, fixed his annual compensation at "One Hundred Pounds Sterling and sixteen Bolls of Coals," a boll being equal to six bushels.

Throughout his long life Dr. Shirrefs was a figure of great dignity and prominence in Aberdeen. In addition to being Chaplain of the Royal Aberdeen Volunteers and Minister of the principal church, he was a member of the Committee of the Poor Hospital, Director of the Infirmary, and President of the Aberdeen Society for the Behoof of the Children of the Clergy.

In 1795 he was given the degree of Doctor of Divinity by Kings College, Aberdeen, and in the same year was appointed Patron of the Corporations, a position of distinction as honorary head of the town guilds. A portrait of him hangs in the Lesser Hall of the Buildings of the Seven Incorporated Trades. In 1807 he was appointed Moderator of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

A sketch of his life is included in Bruce's Eminent Men of Aberdeen, published in 1841.

On account of his mother's descent from the Burnetts of Sauchen — a branch of the family of Burnett of Leys — there had always been a friendship between the Shirrefs and the Burnetts. This was shown by the appointment of young Shirrefs to the scholarship above referred to. It was evidenced again in 1807 when Sir Robert Burnett of Leys, Seventh Baronet, showed his confidence in Dr. Shirrefs by entrusting him with the early education of his son William, who became a distinguished officer of the Royal Navy. (See Chapter 15.)

Dr. Shirrefs was of notable ancestry (see Chapter 18), and his wife was Amelia Morison, whose father and grandfather had both been Provost, or Chief Magistrate, of Aberdeen.

Dr. Shirrefs died in 1830, in his seventy-ninth year, and was sincerely mourned by all of Aberdeen.

WEST CHURCH OF ST. NICHOLAS, ABERDEEN

In the Summer of 1929 I spent a month in Montclair, New Jersey. While there I learned that a famous Scottish minister was preaching at one of the churches, in an exchange agreement with a local clergyman. By a strange chance he proved to be Rev. A. W. Scudamore Forbes, B. D., from the West Church of St. Nicholas, Aberdeen, where my great grandfather, Rev. James Shirrefs, D. D., preached for thirty years, more than a century and a half ago.

I called upon him and was able to learn the history of this famous church from an authoritative source at first hand.

He told me that the site of the West Church had been used as a place of worship since the middle of the 12th Century, and that while the building had been repaired and reconstructed from time to time there are still some stones in the present edifice that were there in 1150.

Up to the year 1560 there was one great church, Roman Catholic, known as the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas — the only church in Aberdeen. It was the town church, or cathedral, of Aberdeen.

In 1560 the Reformation abolished Romanism in Scotland, and the large Collegiate church, not being required for the various altars and elaborate services of the Roman Catholic Church, was divided into two places of Presbyterian worship. The East Church used the choir and transept of the old church, and the West Church used the nave.

Between 1560 and 1745 very little had been done to the West Church, and it had fallen into bad repair. In 1745, the Duke of Cumberland, who was sent to subdue "Prince Charlie" and his followers during the Jacobite Rebellion, used the church as a magazine for military supplies. Subsequently the roof fell in and the church became derelict.

In 1765 it was reconstructed inside the shell of the old edifice under plans donated to the Town Council by James Gibbs, an Aberdonian who had gone to London and become a famous architect. Some of his other designs were the Radcliff Library at Oxford, St.-Martins-in-the-Fields, London, and numerous other churches and monuments.

The West Church is a handsome stone structure, and is located at the corner of Union and Bon Accord streets in the center of Aberdeen. It is the official church of the city, a sort of cathedral of the district, where the Lord Provost and Magistrates attend annually, and all the great civic services are held.

The East Church and tower were destroyed by fire in 1874, but were subsequently rebuilt at the expense of the municipality. The West Church escaped with very little damage. The following account of the fire is taken from the Aberdeen Bon Accord and Northern Pictorial, of April 13, 1929, kindly sent me by Mr. Forbes:

"There has not been a more thrilling scene than the burning of the East Parish Church in 1874, a conflagration made memorable by the highly spectacular destruction of the old oak steeple. Lead covered the oak, and when the fire got a firm hold, cascades of the molten metal poured down over the square walls of the tower, like a brilliantly illuminated waterfall. There might have been greater artistic loss, however, if the fire had spread to the West Kirk. One might have borne with the destruction of the handsome wood-work, but had the tapestries perished Aberdeen would have lost art treasures unequalled in Scotland."

The tapestries referred to, of which there are four, were executed by "Bonnie Mary Jamesone," a daughter of George Jamesone, the famous Scottish portrait painter, some of whose work hangs in Crathes Castle (see Chapter 8). They were wrought about the middle of the 17th Century, and represent a long lifetime of painstaking effort. It is suspected that her distinguished father may have helped somewhat with the design.

Dr. Shirrefs and his wife are buried in the church yard, and also his father and others of the family. The graves are about ten feet to the right of the middle walk leading to the church from the gate at Union Street, and are marked by three flat stones appropriately inscribed. The graves of Aunt Margaret Thom and her husband are also to be found there:

Another stone of interest in the church yard is a large flat slab with the following quaint inscription partially surrounding the Burnett coat-of-arms:

REV. HENRY HINE, Husband of Amelia Burnett

Henry Hine was a son of John Hine, an Excise Officer in the Midland Counties in England, born about 1780. John Hine's parents died when he was young, and he was reared by his grandfather, a farmer owning more than one farm. John Hine married Elizabeth Price, daughter of Mr. Price of Warwick, England, and had four sons, of whom Henry was the eldest.

Henry Hine was born 8 August, 1812, at Bellbroughton, Staffordshire, England. After a suitable education he was ordained a Wesleyan minister, and served the church for sixty-four years.

His first charge was as Assistant Pastor in Aberdeen, and there he met Amelia Burnett. The result of this meeting is indicated in a letter which he wrote to his mother in January, 1839, as follows:

"My soul has been much quickened and blest during the past year, and guided, as I believe, by Providence, I have commenced an acquaintance which I trust will be crowned with comfort and usefulness in time, and with the purer joys of eternity."

The feelings expressed by the young minister were fully shared by Amelia, but her romance was threatened by a formidable rivalry, which is rather quaintly described in another extract from the same letter:

"My dear Miss Burnett is well and we feel an increasing fondness for each other. Our acquaintance is known, and the gossip about it has been somewhat annoying.

"A Lady, who joined the Society soon after I came and professed great attachment to my ministry, laid the matter to heart, when it got abroad. I had behaved towards her in a cold and distant manner, because it was rumoured that she laid siege to me, and though she is of noble birth, and lives upon her fortune, I could not turn my attention there.

"She is rising above it, but I fear her attachment to Methodism is cooling. I am grieved, not flattered, by such an occurrence, and it is well in other respects that I am engaged.

"Miss B. sends her love to my Mother, and if it is the will of God will rejoice to have intercourse with her."

Here was a situation such as J. M. Barrie would have delighted to weave into a story — and indeed Thrums was not far away. We can picture the determined noblewoman, intent upon her conquest, the embarrassed young minister coldly resisting her advances, the ladies of the kirk looking on with eyes bulging and tongues wagging, and the demure Amelia, outwardly calm but doubtless inwardly wondering whether her Henry would be able to withstand the "siege."

But love finally triumphed, as is shown by the following entry in the family Bible:

and the other two are the same as the first two.

The first two are the same as the first two.

The first two are the same as the first two.

The first two are the same as the first two.

Amelia Burnett, Wife of Rev. Henry Hine

Portrait of [illegible name] [illegible text]

"22 Augt, 1839, at Friendville, Aberdeen, by the Revd. George Morison, of Banchory Ternan, nr Aberdeen, Great Uncle of the Bride, the Revd Henry Hine, Wesleyan Minister, Aberdeen, to Amelia, eldest daughter of the late Robert Burnett, Writer to the Signet, Edinburgh."

Amelia is described as a "well educated, pretty and sprightly lassie," who was sought in marriage by a Scotch Presbyterian minister, but Henry Hine and Methodism proved too strong a counter-attraction.

At this time Henry was twenty-seven years of age and Amelia was twenty-two. They were both well fitted, by training, temperament and character, for the life of Christian service which they began together.

In the year of Henry Hine's marriage to Amelia Burnett, the centenary of Methodism was celebrated, and the sum of £222,000 was raised as a thanksgiving offering in connection with that event.

A large part of this sum was used for colleges, schools and missions, and a great Forward Movement was inaugurated. Large mission halls were built in the principal towns of England, Scotland and Ireland; chapels which had been closed were re-opened, and an entrance was found into many villages; weak circuits were grouped together and gained fresh energy and hope from the union.

Henry Hine was a vital part of this movement. During his long ministry it was his privilege to preach the gospel in more than a dozen different cities and towns of the United Kingdom.

In all these communities his eloquence, sincerity and Christian example made numerous converts, while his sterling character and sympathetic understanding resulted in warm friendships which endured through life. In addition to his forensic ability he had a fine bass voice, and was also the author of many hymns.

Amelia was a real helpmeet. Her successful classes for young girls were an essential part of the parish work.

When advancing age compelled Henry Hine's retirement, he and Amelia found a peaceful refuge near the home of his son Frederick, and here they "fell asleep," he on 27 January, 1899, and she on 13 April of the same year. They lie side by side in Smithdown Road Cemetery, Liverpool, and their memory is honored by their many descendants throughout the world, and by all who knew them.

MAJ.-GEN. JAMES GEORGE BALMAIN,
Husband of Jane Farquhar Burnett

Maj.-Gen. James George Balmain had a long and distinguished career in the British Army, serving almost continuously in India.

He was born 11 May, 1814, and entered Addiscombe Military College in 1828. He graduated in 1830, and less than a year later arrived in India for duty with the Madras Artillery, to which he was attached during the whole forty years of his military service.

After passing through the various grades he was promoted to Major-

General on the last day of December, 1870, and was retired on the same day.

According to the records of the India Office he commanded Artillery and served as Executive Engineer in the investment of the Fort of Rainhow, and was employed in the siege of Dharoor in 1851. He was Commissioner of Chutteesgurh in 1862, with the rank of Colonel.

At one point in his career, in order to suppress a native insurrection he caused fifty of the ringleaders to be tied to the mouths of cannon, which were then discharged. Later in life it distressed him that he "had had the power of life and death," but was reminded that his drastic action had saved many more lives.

He died at Wimbledon 3 August, 1893, aged seventy-nine.

JULIA MARIA CHIPP

Wife of James Gilbert Burnett, and Mother of the Author

Julia Maria Chipp was born in Kingston, New York, 9 May, 1840, and died in Los Angeles, California, 21 June, 1905. She was the daughter of Charles Winans Chipp and Eleanora Deyo, and a descendant of John Chipp, who came to America from England in 1764. An account of the Chipp family and alliances will be found in Chapter 27.

My mother's parents died during her infancy, and her earliest recollection was being lifted up to look into her mother's coffin. She was adopted by an uncle, Warren Chipp, and was brought up as one of his children. His young bride, Elizabeth Graham Burnett, tenderly took the place of the mother the little orphan had never known.

Her girlhood at "Brookside," the Chipp home in Kingston, was a happy one, and there she met my father — a brother of her foster mother — and they were married 7 June, 1865. Although he was twenty years her senior the union proved to be an ideal one, and their short married life of five years was marked by complete and perfect happiness.

While my father was an actor, my mother was never inside of a theatre until after her marriage, and then only as a spectator.

When she was left a widow by my father's sudden death, she supported herself and her two small children as a writer, dramatic reader and teacher of elocution. She was a contributor to Harper's Magazine, Scribner's, Christian Union, Christian at Work, Hearth and Home, New York Graphic and other periodicals. Many of her poems were widely copied in the daily press, and received high praise from such eminent editors and critics as Dr. J. G. Holland, Henry M. Alden, Oliver Johnson, William Winter and others.

In 1882 she obtained a position in the United States Patent Office at Washington, and was subsequently promoted, through the personal kindness of President Chester A. Arthur, to Assistant Librarian of the Department of the Interior. This work was pleasant, congenial and remunerative, and she held the office for about six years while my brother and I were securing an education and preparing to assume the burden of the family support.

After her death my mother's poems were printed in book form under the title Aspirations and Other Poems, and some of her prose writings were also published under the title True and Other Stories.

REV. ALFRED EDWARD HOWSE, Husband of Elizabeth Jane Hine

Alfred Edward Howse was born at Islington, London, England, 21 November, 1854. He was a son of Nathaniel Howes and Sarah Early, and a grandson of James Howes and Sarah Ann Dold. The latter were "1820 Settlers" in South Africa — equivalent to those who came to America on the Mayflower.

James Howes was murdered by the natives during the Kaffir war of 1850-53, leaving a large family and a considerable estate, in land, cattle and importing business.

Alfred was reared in England and educated at Truro College. After his marriage to Elizabeth Jane Hine in 1879 he removed to South Africa and assumed the management of his father's extensive affairs.

He had always had a strong leaning toward the church, and was a lay preacher for many years. He finally yielded to the call of the ministry, and, at the age of thirty-eight, embarked upon a new career in which he and his wife found their greatest usefulness and joy.

Ordained in 1892, he was a minister of the Wesleyan Methodist Church for twenty-seven years, serving in some of the most important circuits in South Africa. He retired from active service in 1920 and resided in Grahamstown, where, as a supernumerary, he assisted the circuit ministers as required, until failing health compelled him to give up the preaching that he so dearly loved.

He died at Eshowe, Zululand, 5 July, 1931, and was sincerely mourned by his family and his host of friends.

ERNEST DUGMORE BEALE, Husband of Hilda Burnett Howse

For forty-five years Ernest Dugmore Beale was Native Commissioner, Resident Magistrate and Chief Magistrate, Department of Justice, Union of South Africa. He served in many important districts. His final post was Chief Magistrate, Port Elizabeth, Cape Province.

His constructive work among the natives was outstanding. He established native agricultural colleges and elective native councils. He taught the principles of road building, soil management, and other useful subjects.

In a district like Zululand, where the blacks outnumbered the whites forty to one, wise administration and even-handed justice are of the utmost importance. Ernest Beale had an enviable reputation for both.

The natives called him "the Interpreter of Dreams" because he made their dream of self-government come true. He possessed the love of the native population, the confidence of the Government and the esteem of all. He was awarded the King's Medal for service to South Africa.

He retired in 1942, but, with characteristic energy, he immediately increased his war work as Price Control Officer, Civil Defense Officer, and member of numerous committees. Overwork brought on a complete physical breakdown, and eventually sudden death, which was mourned by all as a National loss.

ANNETTA REBECCA BIGGS, Wife of Warren Sidney Chipp

Annetta Rebecca Biggs was born 2 May, 1866, at Montpelier, Indiana, daughter of George Washington Biggs and Margaret (Baldwin) Biggs.

She married (1st) before 1887, Harry E. Klingensmith, sawmill operator, who was born 2 October, 1862, and died 13 March, 1896; and (2nd) Warren Sidney Chipp (see No. 48, Chapter 23).

She has been very active in church and temperance work, and is a life member of both the National and International Women's Christian Temperance Union. She organized the women's Baptist work in Idaho, was the first State President, and a member of the State Board for several years.

She organized and was one of the first teachers in the Americanization work in Idaho, with special attention to Orientals. Her work for many years as a prison evangelist has been outstanding.

The Chipp home in Boise is called "Chipp Inn" by many visitors, as it has extended a cordial and impartial welcome to discharged prisoners, National workers of all kinds and missionaries from many fields.

Her children by her first marriage, all living and successful, are as follows:

- I. Gladys Klingensmith. Born 11 March, 1887; married, 1913, John Hamilton, a steam fitter by trade, born 18 March, 1882, and has issue:
 1. Annetta Hamilton, born 17 September, 1914. Unmarried.
 2. Ronald J. Hamilton, born 9 December, 1917; married Naomi Godfrey, and has issue:
 - i. Marc. Ronald Hamilton, born 25 September, 1941.
 - ii. Karren Lourayne Hamilton, born 24 August, 1945.
- II. Lloyd H. Klingensmith, born 19 October, 1888. Wholesale grocer; President Mountain States Wholesale Grocery of Boise, Idaho, and partner in two others. Married, 1915, Lourayne Baker.
- III. Charles B. Klingensmith, born 18 April, 1892, died 7 April, 1948. Electrical salesman for many years; served on State Priority Board. Married, 1913, Agnes Pryor, and had issue:
 1. Harry E. Klingensmith, born 25 April, 1915. Graduate Boise High School. Timekeeper for Morrison Knudson Co., International contractors. Private 1st Class, World War II.
 2. William W. Klingensmith, born 18 May, 1916. Graduate Boise High School. Was with Morrison Knudson Company, International contractors; also manager of general store at Stibnite, Idaho. Married, 1937, Mary Howard, and has issue:
 - i. Joel Klingensmith, born 20 July, 1941.
 - ii. Kay Klingensmith, born 8 July, 1945.

RETROSPECT

Here ends the history of the Burnett Family and its alliances. It has been an interesting tale, spanning eight countries, eight wars and eight centuries. In every generation there have been found the same pioneering spirit, the same devotion to duty and the same loyalty to country, whether native or adopted.

The members of these families have played their part on the ships of the sea, and against backgrounds of Scottish highlands and lowlands, South African veldts, American cities, Canadian prairies and Australian bush.

They have fought in wars for conquest, wars for defense and wars for independence. In all times and in all circumstances they have conducted themselves in a way to reflect credit upon their ancestors and provide inspiration for their descendants.

THEORY

The first part of the paper is devoted to the study of the properties of the function $f(x)$ defined by the equation $f(x) = \sum_{n=0}^{\infty} a_n x^n$, where a_n are the coefficients of the power series. It is shown that $f(x)$ is a continuous function of x and that it satisfies the functional equation $f(x) = f(x^2) + x f(x)$. This equation is solved by the method of successive approximations, and it is shown that the solution is unique. The second part of the paper is devoted to the study of the properties of the function $g(x)$ defined by the equation $g(x) = \sum_{n=0}^{\infty} b_n x^n$, where b_n are the coefficients of the power series. It is shown that $g(x)$ is a continuous function of x and that it satisfies the functional equation $g(x) = g(x^2) + x g(x)$. This equation is solved by the method of successive approximations, and it is shown that the solution is unique. The third part of the paper is devoted to the study of the properties of the function $h(x)$ defined by the equation $h(x) = \sum_{n=0}^{\infty} c_n x^n$, where c_n are the coefficients of the power series. It is shown that $h(x)$ is a continuous function of x and that it satisfies the functional equation $h(x) = h(x^2) + x h(x)$. This equation is solved by the method of successive approximations, and it is shown that the solution is unique.

IX. Sir William Forbes of Money Musk, who married Elizabeth Wishart, daughter of the Laird of Pitarrow; created a Knight Baronet of Nova Scotia 1626; died 22 July, 1661. Had three sons and three daughters, including

X. Sir William, 2nd Baronet, who married Jean, daughter of Sir Thomas Burnet of Leys, from whom descended the Forbes of Pitsligo; and JEAN, who married ALEXANDER LUNAN, Pastor of Money Musk.

Note: Jean Forbes was the great, great grandmother of Jane Lunan, who married David Shirrefs, and was the mother of Rev. James Shirrefs and grandmother of AMELIA SHIRREFS BURNETT.

GORDON ALLIANCE WITH LUNAN

Genealogy of BARBARA GORDON of Merdrum, Wife of William Lunan (History of the Ancient, Noble and Illustrious Family of Gordon, by William Gordon of Old Aberdeen, 1726; The Gordon Pedigree, MS by William Gordon of London, 1781; letter from Dr. George Burnett, Lyon King of Arms, to George Cadenhead, July 2, 1868; The Family of Cadenhead, by George Cadenhead, Procurator Fiscal of Aberdeen, 1887, p. 33; Scots Peerage, edited by Sir James Balfour Paul, Lyon King of Arms, 1907, iv, p. 506.)

I. Richard or Richer Gordon, earliest of the name found of record in Scotland, was living in Berwickshire 1171. Died about 1200 and was succeeded by his son,

II. Sir Thomas of Gordon, who received the rank of Knighthood before 1232, and was succeeded by his son,

III. Sir Thomas of Gordon, younger, who appears as Laird of Gordon after 1232, and was succeeded by his daughter,

IV. Alicia of Gordon, who married her cousin, Sir Adam Gordon, said to have died in 1270 on a crusade under King Louis XI of France. She is said to have died in 1280, and was succeeded by her son,

V. Adam of Gordon, who died in 1296, and whose widow Marjorie received from King Edward I of England an order for the restoration of her rights in the Berkshire lands. He was succeeded by his son,

VI. Sir Adam Gordon, who did homage to King Edward I in 1296, and then held the rank of Knight. Received many honors and grants from Edward I, but in 1313 forsook his allegiance to England and joined Robert Bruce, from whom he received many charters, including the barony of Strathbogie. He died shortly before 1329, and was succeeded by his son,

VII. Sir Adam Gordon, who was one of the leaders of the army at the battle of Halidon in 1333. He died about 1353, and was succeeded by his son,

VIII. John Gordon, who was taken prisoner by the English about 1357. Received from King David II a confirmation of the lands of Strathbogie granted to his grandfather, Sir Adam. He died 1360-61, and was succeeded by his son, IX. Sir John Gordon, Laird of Strathbogie, a distinguished soldier, who received from Robert II in 1376 a renewed confirmation of the charter of Strathbogie. Sir John Gordon was not married so far as known, but there is clear evidence that he had two sons, whose mother is said to have been Elizabeth Cruickshank, daughter of the Laird of Aswanley. These were "Jock" and "Tam" Gordon, of popular fame, styled natural sons, but probably the offspring of a "handfasting" union, and therefore not regarded in the Highlands as illegitimate, although not recognized by the law or the church.

The ancestor of Barbara Gordon, who married William Lunan, was the elder of these sons,

X. John ("Jock") Gordon of Esse or Scurdargue, who married Elizabeth Maitland (called by some writers Margaret), daughter of Robert Maitland of Netherdale. He died about 1420, leaving a son,

XI. William Gordon of Tillitarmount, who married a daughter of Sir John Rutherford, and had a son,

XII. Patrick Gordon of Fulsieumont (Esslemont), who married Rachel, daughter of Barclay of Towie, and had a son,

XIII. George Gordon of Coclarachie, who married a daughter of Oliphant of Berrydales, and had one son,

XIV. George Gordon of Coclarachie, who married the daughter and only child of John Gordon of Tilliquhoudie (young son of Adam Gordon of Aboyne and Sutherland), heiress, and had one son,

XV. George Gordon of Coclarachie, who married the daughter of James Duncan of Merdrum, and had two sons, viz., George of Coclarachie, and

XVI. Alexander Gordon of Merdrum, whose daughter, BARBARA GORDON, married (1st) _____ Orem, and (2nd) WILLIAM LUNAN, great grandfather of Amelia Shirrefs.

THAIN ALLIANCE WITH LUNAN

Genealogy of ISOBEL THAIN, Wife of William Lunan (The Family of Cadenhead, pp. 33, 48, 49; Letter of Dr. George Burnett, Lyon King of Arms, to George Cadenhead, Esq., 25 May, 1868.)

Blackhall (Parish of Inverury) belonged to the Blackhalls of that Ilk from an early period, with the office of coroner and forester of the Garioch attached to the land.

Early in the Seventeenth Century the family seems to have been in difficulties. Alexander Blackhall of that Ilk in 1610, with consent of Leslie of Balquharn, his Interdictor, conveyed Blackhall with the coroner and forestship to Alexander Blackhall of Barra, a cadet, whose mother was a Burnett of Leys, reserving the liferent of Janet Strachan, widow of his cousin, to whom he had succeeded.

It was thought by Dr. George Burnett, Lyon, that the last Blackhall who owned the land served to his father in 1645; the lands were alienated to one _____ Thain, whose family held them for some generations.

William Thain, of Blackhall, afterwards designed "of Melvinside," sold Blackhall to one _____ Grant about 1725. Died at Blairdall in 1739. Had a daughter ISOBEL, who married WILLIAM LUNAN, son of the William Lunan who married Barbara Gordon.

Family of Cadenhead, pp. 29 and 49, it was stated that John Lunan, great grandfather of Amelia Shirrefs, married Mary Burnett, daughter of the third laird of Sauchen, whereas in The Family of Burnett of Leys the wife of John Lunan is shown as Jean, daughter of the second laird.

I submitted this discrepancy to the Lord Lyon King of Arms, the highest genealogical authority in Scotland, and in due time received a report from Col. Thomas Innes of Learney, Carrick Pursuivant, to the effect that he had made a re-examination of the records and was convinced that beyond a reasonable doubt the lady in question was Jean Burnett, daughter of the second laird.

I to XIII. The first thirteen generations of the genealogy of Jean Burnett will be found in Chapter 2 of this volume, the Family of Burnett of Leys, Generations I to XIII.

XIV. Thomas Burnet, first laird of Sauchen, was the eldest son of Sir Thomas Burnet of Leys by his second marriage, to Jean Moncrieff. Thomas, in 1648, married Bessie, eldest daughter and co-heir of William Burnet, laird of Sauchen and Cairnday and pastor of Kinnerny. His son,

XV. Robert Burnet, second laird of Sauchen, married Jean Reid, daughter of John Reid, and had a daughter,

XVI. JEAN, who married, before 1739, John Lunan.

Jane Lunan, eldest daughter of John Lunan and Jean Burnet, married David Shirrefs, and was the mother of James Shirrefs, and grandmother of AMELIA SHIRREFS, who married ROBERT BURNETT.

MORISON AND ALLIANCES

Genealogy of AMELIA MORISON, Wife of Rev. James Shirrefs, and mother of Amelia Shirrefs Burnett (History of the Morison or Morrison Family, by L. A.
